THE DEATH of Dr. Albert A. Michelson is a loss to science and to the world. His life honors his country, his family, and the Jewish race. A graduate of the Annapolis Naval Academy, Dr. Michelson returned to the academy to teach science. He returned to active service in the war, devising scientific methods for detecting the approach of submarines, and contributing other important discoveries.

Barely out of his teens, he was showing the Annapolis student how to measure the speed of light, with a home made apparatus, when he discovered that the accepted light measurement was erroneous, and notified the scientific bodies of the world of his corrected measurement, 186,000 miles per second.

Thus, he gave to the world a correct "cosmic yardstick" by which the distances of fixed stars and outside universes are measured. So many "light years," so many miles.

The French kept deep under ground a metre made of platinum as a permanent record of their measurement of the earth, on which their decimal systems of weights, measures and money is based. That metre, kept at even temperature, not contracting or expanding, would always re-establish metric system.

Michelson said, "I shall give you something more permanent and you will need no metre of platinum."

He measured one of the rays in the spectrum, that of a certain metal, announced the result, which was about the millionth part of an inch and said "multiply the length of that ray by so many millions, and you will have your metre, so long as the world lasts."

French science verified his measurement and the Nobel prize for physics was given to him.

Scientists in Berlin, praising and crowning Michelson after the Nobel prize award said: "We wish also to honor his distinguished father, for his great service in measuring the speed of light." They did not think one so young could have made the Nobel measurement 30 years before and concluded that Michelson's father must have done it.

"I did not tell them," said Michelson to this writer, "that my father, who began as a clothing store in Virginia City, wondered what good I could do myself or anybody else trying to find out how fast light travels."

Michelson's modesty equalled his greatness. Asked at the Quadrangle Club in the University of Chicago, "Do you think I could possibly get any clear idea of modern higher mathematics," he smiled with perfect sincerity: "Well, I think you might, but I cannot."

At that time by mathematical calculation he was computing the rigidity of the earth, which he estimated at about the same rigidity as though the earth were made of solid steel.

He measured the rise and fall of the tide in a pipe one inch in diameter, more than a mile long. You know, of course, that the tide rises and falls in a small pond, a tea cup or an inch pipe, just as it does in the ocean, only the tide is not so high in a tea cup.

With the sun and moon pulling together, the tide rises to a certain maximum height. With the moon above and the sun off to one side, pulling against each other, the tide is lowered, because the conflicting pull draws the earth out of shape. And the amount of the earth's distortion enabled Michelson to show that the earth is as rigid as a steel ball.

But he did not call that "higher mathematics."

He was a great man, thought little of himself, except as he hoped to be useful, thought nothing of money, never considered it. Yet, Doctor Millikan, one of his students of 34 years ago, says:

"I personally believe that the United States has not had, in this generation, a greater economic asset than Albert Michelson."

It would interest Michelson, the father who had the little Virginia City clothing store, to know that his son, Albert, who knew and cared nothing for money, dying poor, after spending his Nobel prize money in scientific experiment, had contributed millions in wealth to his native country.

Providence is not wasteful or wilfully destructive. There must be a place, somewhere in space, to which a spirit of such great genius and noble character can go and continue work.

MADRID MOBS BURN CHURCHES

NUNS, MONKS BEATEN BY RIOTERS

Martial Law Is Declared When Fierce Anti-Clerical Demonstrations Break Out

Madrid, May 11 (AP)—About 20 persons, including monks and nuns, were injured tonight, when a mob burned the Salesians Church. The injured were beaten with clubs and fists as they were escaping.

Madrid, May 11 (AP)—Despite all of every effort to restore order, mobs of Loyalty-incensed students today were burning Catholic institutions and attacking others in anti-church demonstrations.

The republican Government, which blamed the rioting on the Communists, declared martial law and announced that it would maintain the republic by force if necessary.

Shortly before 4 p. m. regular army infantry and cavalry marched into the streets and began taking over from the civil guards. Despite this show of force, with its threat of open street warfare, the mobs continued their attack on Catholic institutions.

The stock exchange was closed and heavy patrols of police and civil guardsmen were posted through the city.

THREE LIVES LOST

The rioting, which began yesterday in anti-monarchical demonstrations resulting the loss of three lives, developed into anti-church demonstrations early this morning.

The Jesuit headquarters were first attacked and burned, then the mob turned its attention to a church adjoining the headquarters and this also was burned.

From there the mob surged to the Carmelite monastery in the Plaza Espana, near the former royal palace. Here the same procedure was followed, gasoline being

ATHLETE DYING AFTER BEATING

Lynn police today began an investigation of an alleged beating inflicted on Michael Berzulenis, 20, of River st. former high school football star, who was reported in dying condition in Danvers state hospital.

Berzulenis was sent to the hospital yesterday for observation, after he was discovered beating his head against the bars in a Lynn police headquarters cell.

He had been taken to the police station after a report had been received that he was acting peculiarly in his home.

Examined by Dr. Charles M. Worthen, police surgeon, Berzulenis said his trouble was due to a beating received in a West Lynn restaurant three weeks ago.

At that time he was picked up with a gash in his head, and taken to a hospital, later being sent home.

This report, based on seven visits to the county jail, where the youthful prisoner was examined, will replaced in the hands of the clerk of the superior court.

It will be available to both Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Gregg and Atty. Richard J. McCormick, counsel for Noble.

The prisoner was up at his usual hour this morning, to eat a hearty breakfast and turn with his customary zest in the newspapers.

They had dog sledges and supplies for about 15 days.

Lightning played havoc in Greater Boston during the storm early today, one bolt shattering windows or throwing occupants from bed in nine houses in Mattapan.

By a lucky freak, however, the lightning failed to strike any person, although several were stunned by the concussion.

The electric storm was declared by the weather man to be forerunner of a storm that will bring rain again tonight and tomorrow, with continued cool weather.

Mattapan's freak bolt of lightning that damaged nine houses in three streets caused an aggregate damage estimated at $10,000.

NEW MYSTERY GIRL NAMED IN POISON LETTER

Dist. Atty. Bishop revealed today that 12 persons, including 12 faculty members, had received Harvard poison pen notes. He also disclosed he had received an unsigned letter stating that professors and society girls had been receiving poison pen missives for more than a year. He said a five-year sentence awaits the guilty person or persons, if caught.

Two more girls were named today in the Harvard poison pen plot, as President A. Lawrence Lowell and alienists of the Harvard Medical School staff launched a new investigation to detect the sender or senders of letters attacking Timothy A. Taracouzio, law school instructor.

One of these girls, Miss Linda Whittier MacDonald, living in Lonfellow apartment house in Massachusetts ave., Harvard sq., was revealed as the recipient of a letter assailing the former Russian air service captain.

The other girl is Mary Soren, a subject of much mystery, as yet undispelled by the official probe which has been conducted for more than two months by Middlesex county authorities.

In a poison pen letter addressed to a professor of the law school, "Mary Soren" was named as one of Taracouzio's friends and referred to as the daughter of a prominent New York man and a former visitor to Cambridge.

WRITTEN BY HAND

This letter was the only one written in longhand, the others being typewritten. It was mailed from New Jersey, and investigation there by State detectives did not reveal any clues worth following.

"The name of Mary Soren recalls nothing to me. No letters of the nature described have ever been written by me to her," wrote Taracouzio to Vice-Dean Calvert Magruder of the law school regarding this phase of the mystery.

Taracouzio added that the date on the letter showed it was written very soon after he had received a visit from a mysterious stranger who professed to have "learned all about me and my family from some one of the Harvard authorities."

The other two girls who received letters are Miss Dora Kittredge, daughter of Prof. George Lyman Kittredge, the noted authority on Shakespeare, and Miss Marjorie McKain, Boston manager for a national publishing concern.

WARNING IN LETTER

Miss MacDonald was revealed as one of Taracouzio's guests at a bridge party in his home, where vodka was drunk and after the young instructor protected his fellow guests from insult by another faculty member.

The letter she received informed her that the writer admired and respected her but felt it necessary to warn her against being seen with

OTHERS HURT IN AUTO MISHAPS ON WEEK-END

Five Injured in Lynn, Four in Kingston and Woman Pedestrian in South End

A Brighton man is dead, a woman is near death in Boston City Hospital, and two girls are in critical condition in Quincy City Hospital following auto accidents in South Braintree and this city.

Wendell C. Dow, 25, of Brighton, a clerk in a Back Bay hotel, died at noon today after a car he was driving skidded and crashed into a tree. With him in the car were two girl college students and another man.

CRASH HALTS MERCY ERRAND

The South End woman, Miss Julia Moore, 45, of 24 Hanson st., was struck by an auto operated by Herbert E. Hurd of River av., Hyde Park, as he was rushing to the City Hospital with the parents of his five-year-old niece, upon whom a blood transfusion was to be performed.

The auto which Dow was driving was traveling along Plain st., in South Braintree, in the front seat with Dow was Miss Caroline Schwabb, 20, a Wellesley college student. In the rear seat were Miss Miriam Jacobs, 21, a student at Simmons College, and Ivor V. Campbell, 23, of Brighton ave., Brighton.

CHILD MAY DIE

The accident at Columbus and Massachusetts aves may result in the death of five-year-old Charlotte Hurd, to whose bedside her parents were rushing when their car ran into Miss Moore.

Hurd received a telephone call from the hospital shortly after midnight. He was informed that the little girl, who is suffering from scarlet fever, had had a relapse and a blood transfusion was necessary.

Hurd drove to his brother's home and started to drive him and his wife to the hospital. Blinded by the driving rainstorm and going at a fast rate, Hurd failed to see Miss Moore as she started across the street.

CAMBRIDGE VICTIM BETTER

Friends in Boston and Cambridge learned today of a slight improvement in the condition of Miss Dana Sieveling of 5 Concord ave., Cambridge, dancer and dancing teacher, who, with her mother, Mrs. Mary Sieveling, was injured late Saturday night in an automobile accident at Cobbleskill, N. Y.

The driver of the car in which Miss Sieveling and her mother were riding, Wallis W. Webber, a Boston insurance man, died of a fractured skull shortly after the accident. Miss Sieveling suffered a probable fracture of the left thigh, cuts about the head, face, arms and legs.

TWO DYING IN LYNN CRASH

An auto ride of three girls and their boy companions came to an end last night when their hired sedan skidded on a slippery road and crashed into a telegraph pole on Myrtle st., Lynn, sending all six occupants of the car to Lynn Hospital. One of the girls and a youth may die of their injuries.

The injured are:

HARRISON, Nellie, 17, of 39 Blossom st., Lynn, possible fractured skull, and concussion; name on danger list.

HARRISON, Edith, 18, same address, deep lacerations of face.

SHOLNICK, Jean, 17, of 56½ Prospect st., Lynn, cuts and bruises and general shaking up.

CENNANI, Raymond, 18, of 223 Summer st., Lynn, minor injuries.

The driver of the car, Jose J. Spina, 20, of 98 Eutaw st., Lynn, was uninjured.

Dartmouth Grad Dies After Crash

Hanover, N. H., May 11—Ralph B. Blake, Dartmouth 30, pinned under the wreckage of his automobile when it sideswiped another machine and plunged over an embankment at Thetford, Vt., died yesterday at the Hanover Hospital from crushed ribs and internal injuries. The other car was operated by Drew A. Gordon of White River, Vt.

Blake was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Blake of Stoughton, Mass., and his home was at Jackson Heights, New York city. His father is treasurer of the Stoughton Co-Operative Bank.

The accident happened as Blake, accompanied by his wife, formerly Harriet Anita Baker of Saco, Me., and a friend, Harry Weston, also of Jackson Heights, were returning to Hanover from a house party at Fairlee Lake.

Mrs. Blake escaped with but a slight scratch and a few bruises.

Dollar Liner Only Slightly Damaged

Hongkong, May 11 (AP)—The Dollar liner President Cleveland, which ran aground in a fog on Waglan Island, 25 miles east of here early today, reached Hongkong tonight.

The only visible sign of the accident was the slightly dented plates of the bow at the water line. Divers examined the hull but had not determined the extent of the damage.

HARVARD 'PEN' WRITER TRAILED

Taracouzio, as he was being investigated by the district attorney.

With confidence in her friend, Miss MacDonald turned the letter over to the law school instructor, who in turn passed it on to the investigating authorities.

Another development today was disclosure that Taracouzio only recently received a law school scholarship and also was appointed to the intelligence department of the army, both of which may have screened the envy of other faculty members, for his rise had been rapid.

In a few years Taracouzio had become a very prominent individual among the younger university set, both scholastically and socially.

FORCED TO FLEE

He is a naturalized citizen. Seven or eight years ago he came to this country after being forced to flee from his native land because of his stories as an aviator with the Russian white imperial army against the Bolsheviks, following the revolution.

President Lowell has directed that nothing be left undone to expose the writer of the letters, it was learned today.

Harvard alienists will aid State doctors assigned to the case by Dist. Atty. Warren Lee Bishop of Middlesex County.

Being said today he was also considering employing an alienist not connected with Harvard, possibly Dr. Winfred Overholtzer or Dr. L. Vernon Briggs. Both eminent psychiatrists, but would not do so until he had another conference with the university authorities.

Intimations are that the writer is deprived. Officials said last night he might appear normal to ordinary persons and yet be of depraved sexuality.

After the letters have been studied by the alienists, a group of experts will come under the observation of the psychiatrists. Suspects include persons who have been associated with Taracouzio in college work and social life.

Many typewritten manuscripts, written by students and instructors at the University, have been studied, but one revealed any of the characteristics of the "poison" letters. Typewriters have also been subjected to minute scrutiny but these also have failed to show any clues.

As exhaustive probe of Taracouzio's life since coming to Harvard has convinced Vice-Dean Calvert Magruder of the law school that the young émigré instructor is innocent of the charges made in the letters.

There has been no attempt at extortion in the case, it was learned.

REDS SUSPECTED

Taracouzio, in conferring with the vice-dean, intimated that Communist activities might be at the bottom of the "poison pen" plot against him. The instructor has been explaining the workings of Soviet law to his classes, but it is not known that he has ever expressed any anti-Soviet ideas.

Dr. Eleanor Allen, retained by Taracouzio in the investigation, said last night that investigators were working on several promising leads.

New Dry Study Just Another Bedtime Story, Says Curran

Washington, May 11 (AP)—Prohibition Director Woodcock's new research advisory council today was termed just another commission which will "investigate the bed time story known as national prohibition."

In a statement, President Henry H. Curran of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said he thought the Wickersham commission already had done the job Woodcock planned for the council.

"Life in Washington still seems to be just one new commission after another," Curran said.

1000 KILLED IN BURMA REVOLT

London, May 11 (AP)—Wedgwood Benn, Secretary of State for India, told the House of Commons today that more than 1000 rebels have been killed and about 2000 captured in operations against insurgents in Burma.

The rebels have killed about 100 village headmen in different parts of the affected territory and another battalion of infantry has been summoned from India. Insurgent operations have been in progress in Burma for the past few months.

HUNDREDS FLEE NASHUA FIRE

Nashua, N. H., May 11—Three firemen were overcome and hundreds of employes and customers were driven out today when fire broke out in the Slawsby Block, in the heart of the business section.

Fire Capt. Cornelius Mahan and Fireman James W. Degnan were taken to Memorial hospital suffering from smoke inhalation and another was treated by a physician near the scene.

The blaze started in the basement of the Touraine Fabric Shop, firemen said, and spread to the basement and partitions of the W. F. Grant chain store adjoining.

Eight offices on the ground floor and four apartments on the third floor were hastily vacated by the tenants, the occupants of the apartments forced to flee through the Nutt block adjoining.

A general alarm was sounded calling all the apparatus of the city to the scene.

Coming during the noon rush hours, traffic was badly snarled by the curious, and a section of Main st. was roped off by police to prevent interference from the crowd.

No cause was determined immediately and damages could not be estimated until the water-soaked stock was surveyed.

AS DEATH BECKONED AT THE CURVE

"We'll never make it," one of the girls in the car was heard to cry as this auto started around a curve at South Braintree, and they never did. Wendell C. Dow of Brighton, who was driving, is near death in a hospital. Miss Caroline Schwabb, a Wellesley College girl, and Miss Marion Jacobs, a Simmons College girl, are seriously injured, and Ivor C. Campbell of Brighton escaped with minor injuries. As you see by the pictures the car left the road and hit a tree. The car was a total wreck. (Staff photo.)

SIX SUMMONED TO TESTIFY IN VAUGHAN CASE

Grand Jury Will Be Asked to Indict the Bank Man for Larceny of $125,000

Six witnesses were summoned today for appearance before the Suffolk County grand jury tomorrow, when an indictment will be sought against Guy L. Vaughan, missing receiver of five banks.

An indictment for alleged larceny of $125,000 will be sought, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. John J. Murphy, in spite of the fact two of the banks are outside of Suffolk County.

He said his evidence will charge the larcenies occurred in his county.

Frederick T. Bonner, temporary receiver for the banks; Francis F. Kirk, head of the accounting firm conducting the audit of Vaughan's affairs; Bank Examiner Norman S. Chadwick, John F. Cronin, clerk of the Supreme Court; Police Lieut. James F. Daley and Police Inspector James S. Concannon are the witnesses called.

AUDIT EXPECTED

Murphy said he expects to have a more complete audit before tomorrow.

In addition to the indictment charging larceny, Vaughan may be faced with criminal proceedings charging contempt of court, it was revealed today, on the grounds that he was an officer of the court in his status as receiver.

Another delay in the report of Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Warner to Gov. Ely on the responsibility of Bank Commissioner Arthur Gay with relation to Vaughan came today with Gov. Ely's absence from the State House another day.

The report was completed by Warner last week, but was not made public by him on orders of the Governor.

ELY HERE TOMORROW

Governor Ely spent the week-end at Allentown, Pa., according to Dewitt Clinton DeWolf, his secretary, and will not return to the State House until tomorrow.

Checks totalling about $6500 were mailed to 125 "transmission" depositors of the Fabrizio Pitocchelli bank in Lawrence today by Bonner, in accordance with the 7 per cent dividend authorized by the Supreme Court Friday.

The money was for transmission to foreign countries and was never sent, the bank failing. Each of Pitocchelli liabie, the court ruled.

TAXI TRIES NEW WINDOW STUNT

A taxicab, which police believe was operated by James M. Finnegan of 15 Bardeen st., Roslindale, apparently skidding and out of control, crashed through a fence and plunged partly through the window of a basement store at 248 West Newton st. near St. Joseph st., Back Bay, early today.

The driver left after the crash. At the hackney license bureau it was learned the car was registered in the name of George F. Turley of 4 Sunset ave., Roslindale. The driver's number was 827, which is that of Finnegan, who is also registered as an employe of Turley at the bureau.

Considerable damage was done to the cab and the store front. The rear wheels of the cab caught on the sidewalk abutment, keeping the machine from plunging entirely through the window.

Plot Victim

PUPILS TESTED IN FEVER SCARE

Examination of 650 pupils of the Lafayette school, Everett, where five pupils have scarlet fever and one teacher has died of this disease, was begun today by five physicians and a staff of nurses.

Examination began after Dr. John A. Brewin, health board chairman, announced that the school would not be closed, despite demands of several parents.

Dr. Brewin explained that to close the school would throw the children together on the street, and playgrounds, which might help spread the disease, whereas in school they would be under constant supervision of doctors and nurses.

Miss Elsie Mason, 48, a teacher in the Everett schools for 20 years, who died Saturday, was buried today in Mt. Laurel Cemetery, Gloucester. All the pupils that have the disease were in her classroom.

Rev. Ulysses S. Randal of Glendale Baptist Church, whose daughter, Martha, 8, is one of the sick pupils, charged laxity in failure to examine all the pupils and fumigate the school after the first case was discovered.

4 Burn to Death in French Bus Crash

St. Etienne, France, May 11 (AP)—Four persons were burned to death in a motorbus which broke through a parapet and fell 30 feet into a ravine at St. Paul en Jarez. Twenty passengers were badly hurt, but managed to scramble from the flames to safety.

CHARITY COAL IS SHORT WEIGHT, DOWD CHARGES

Why Does City Buy From Firm, a Member of Which Has Been Convicted? He Asks

A charge that a blind man in Charlestown, getting charity coal from the city, was given a delivery 300 pounds short, was hurled in the City Council chamber today by Councillor John F. Dowd of Roxbury.

Dowd demanded to know why the Overseers of the Public Welfare had given $62,000 worth of business to a certain company in the past five months.

He charged that one of the members of the concern had been twice convicted in the lower courts for giving shortweight, and had once pleaded guilty in the Superior Court.

Alleging "collusion," he introduced an order, which was unanimously passed, asking the overseers to explain why so much business was given the concern.

"This concern starts delivering coal ordered by the welfare department after 8 o'clock at night, when there is nobody from the office of the sealer of weights and measures to check," said Dowd.

"The concern should be barred from working for the city, yet it received $38,981 in orders for coal from the welfare department to April 1, this year.

"Court records show that one member of the firm was convicted of short weight in the lower court and fined $200. He hired a man in public life to defend him and the case was taken off the list in the district attorney's office.

"A man representing the office of the sealer of weights and measures went to the district attorney, had the name put back on the list and finally on April 17 this firm pleaded guilty to a charge of short weight and was fined $50 by Judge Williams in Superior Court.

"A blind man in Charlestown, receiving coal on orders from the overseers, got only 700 pounds when he should have got 1000 pounds. He told the overseers about it. They didn't prosecute this company, because of its political pull, but they made it deliver 300 pounds more."

4 Held as Robbers After Auto Chase

Whitinsville, May 11 (AP)—After an exciting automobile chase in the Blackstone valley early today and the firing of several shots, Chief Butler and Patrolman Dulen and Leonard captured four men for questioning in regard to a series of thefts in Milford and vicinity.

The men gave their names as Bruno Cosetta, 21, Louis Manguso, 24, Charles Cosmo, 22, and Georgs Papazian, 32, all of Milford. They were booked on charges of breaking and entering. In court they were held for grand jury action.

The People Will Punish Attack on Primary Law

Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad.

Certain self-styled leaders of the Republican party are engaged in a conspiracy to emasculate the direct primaries in Massachusetts through a subterfuge which they are pleased to term a "pre-primary convention."

These men are conspicuous leaders.

They are conspicuous leaders because of the fact that they have led the Republican party to repeated defeats in a State which could and would be Republican if they had the plain, everyday commonsense and political perspicuity to be progressive, tolerant and liberal.

The direct primaries are the people's primaries.

They go to the root of the democratic principle that government shall be for, of and by the people.

The people got rid of the boss-controlled convention.

It was a long, hard fight, lasting a generation. But the people won it.

And they will not give up that great victory to satisfy the ambitions of any little group of tin gods who want to get complete control of politics back into their clumsy hands again.

Direct primaries have actually increased the public's concern in the choice of their public officials.

The records show that four voters are taking part in these primary elections as free, independent American citizens to every one who participated in the old party caucuses when the boodler, corruptionist and fat-purse party was in control.

And even a greater number would participate if the political parties would stimulate their interest and confidence by their independence and progressiveism.

These alleged leaders scold the Governor and the Legislature for "extravagance" in attempting to provide work for the unemployed. Yet they are willing to dip into the public treasury to the extent of $200,000—that would be the minimum cost of a "pre-primary convention"—when their personal, political interests are the stake.

Not a State in the United States which has adopted the direct primaries has allowed it to be destroyed even by subterfuge.

And the people of Massachusetts are not going to be the first to yield their precious rights in their own government.

The people will rise in their wrath. They will claim the political head of every reactionary and political Bourbon who would destroy the progress of the past twenty years and take us back to the corruption and disgusting era of the boss-controlled convention.

Rumors Temple to Oust Aimee in Favor of "Ma"

Los Angeles, May 11 (INS)—Emphatic denials were given today to reports that some members of the Angelus Temple, religious organization, planned to unseat Mrs. Aimie Semple McPherson as leader of the temple and replace her by Mrs. Minnie (Ma") Kennedy, estranged mother of the evangelist.

"Absolutely silly," said many of the Temple members.

R. I. KIDNAPING PLOT FOILED

Providence, May 11 (AP)—An amateurish attempt to extort money from the family of Col. Patrick Quinn, Democratic committeeman from Rhode Island, on threat of kidnaping his son, Thomas, was frustrated in West Warwick today.

Police arrested John Paul Bagley of Appanaugh, R. I., after Bagley is alleged to have appeared at the Quinn home and demanded $1000 of Mrs. Quinn. Young Quinn in the meantime had been called from high school in Providence on a false telephone message, but reached his destination unmolested.

Maids notified Mr. Quinn and the latter notified police, who arrested Bagley before he got out of the Quinn home.

GOLD POURS IN WITH NEW RUSH FOR DIVORCE

Gambling Dens Doll Up With the Boom, and Barkeeps Say "What's Yours?"

(Reno, at the moment, is the most colorful spot in the West. The boldness of its divorce and gambling laws has aroused intense interest throughout the world. Reno, May 11 (US)—From the portals of the Washoe County courthouse emerges a lithesome creature, cool and enchanting in her print frock and modish straw, it might be Newport or Palm Beach.

She stops to imprint a kiss upon a stone pillar of the building, a curious ritual, then walks rapidly to a bridge that spans the Truckee river, removes a circlet of gold from the second finger of her left hand id casts it into the water.

It is Reno!

In the blueish atmosphere of the Bank Gambling Club, grandma is shooting craps. She is a buxom visitor in a faded blue suit, vociferous in her passes. "Whoopla, little Joe," she makes her point. A difficult one at that. The Chinese at her elbow grins approval, as does the sallow Mexican at the end of the green cloth. He had a bet on grandma, too.

Across the street at the soda fountain, little Minnie, on her way home from school, drops a spare nickel in the slot machine and walks away with lip a' tremble.

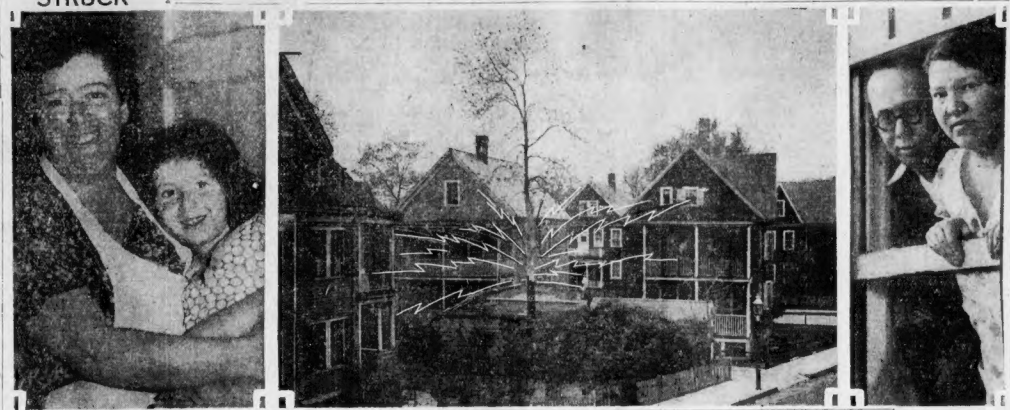
HOW BOLT'S JAVELINS STRUCK

Family Accuses Maine Hunt Guide in Kaufman Mystery



HURLED ABOUT IN STORM

Mrs. Frances Saunders and daughter, Sally, 5, of 9 Willowwood st., Dorchester, who were hurled from bed when lightning shattered a window of their home.

BOLT SHATTERED ON THIS TREE AND ALMOST WRECKED THE NEIGHBORHOOD

Here's the tree that possibly saved the neighborhood of 4-8 Harwood st., Dorchester, when lightning struck during the terrific storm early today. The tree split the bolt into particles, thus lessening its force. These various parts shattered windows, hurled people out of their beds and caused heavy loss. You'll note how bolt hit the houses. SPLITS A TREE

Suddenly it switched again to No. 12, scooting toward the rear, and ricochetting to a tree in the rear, which it split, half of the tree toppling on a garage and damaging it.

Next the freak bolt slithered along the houses in Willowwood st. and Princeton rd. and finally spent its force. Although firemen were summoned, they were amazed to find that no fire had been started by the bolt.

At Winthrop occupants of the three-story dwelling at 22 Faun Bar ave. were stunned by another freak bolt, which raked the house during the storm.

William G. Hennessey, living in the first floor, was scorched on the forehead by the bolt, although he suffered no shock.

Other tenants were stunned and frightened.

CHARLIE TELLS OF HIS PEEVE

London, May 11 (AP)—The Daily Express quoted Charlie Chaplin in an interview at Juan Les Pins, France, as saying:

"Europe has misunderstood me, bullied me and misrepresented me to such an extent that, being a moderately rich man, I don't care a hang whether I ever make another film."

He mentioned among other things widespread comment at his refusal to appear at Monday's "command" performance in London.

"What is all this nonsense about my refusing to appear at a command performance?" he asked. "I've received no command from the king, merely a request from a music hall manager to appear at a charity show.

"They say I have a duty to England. Iwander what duty? I sometimes think my countrymen are the world's greatest hypocrites. Nobody wanted me in England 17 years ago.

"I was just as good an artist then and I slaved and starved for a few shillings weekly. I had to go to America for my chance and I got it. Only then did Europe take the slightest interest in me."

GIRLS STRIKE ON WAGE CUT

Lawrence, May 11—In accordance with a vote taken yesterday, 50 girls employed in the curtain department of the Pacific Print works went on strike this morning, due to a 25 per cent cut in wages.

Picket lines were formed outside the factory grounds by the girls, who range in age from 18 to 23. Other workers, attached to other departments at the factory, were not molested when they entered the employes gate this morning.

Despite the efforts of Robert L. Watts, president of the Lawrence Central Labor Union, who represented the strikers, mill officials failed to come to an agreement yesterday on a final conference.

It was learned that the mill management was willing to make a lesser cut and the girls were willing to stand a slight cut, but the concessions on both sides failed to meet with an agreement.

CHARGE HE HAD NO LICENSE TO SERVE

State Game Commissioner Promises Court Action Over Missing Manufacturer

The search for Mitchell B. Kaufman, missing rubber manufacturer of Boston, took a new turn today when relatives announced they would lodge formal charges with Maine authorities that an unlicensed guide accompanied Kaufman when he mysteriously disappeared in the woods near Crocker Pond last November.

The discovery that Neil Ranclift, who directed the wealthy Boston bachelor, had no authority to act as a guide added complications which threaten to lead to court action.

COURT ACTION LOOMS

George Stopie, commissioner of inland fisheries and game at Augusta,

"I shall investigate the charge at once. This is a matter for the local game warden at Jackman. It is a court offense for a man to act as a guide without having been duly licensed.

"Before taking any action I shall first determine whether Rancourt was actually acting 'in the capacity of guide on the day Kaufman disappeared. There are times when woodsmen hold themselves out for hire as handy men."

QUESTIONED AS GUIDE

Commissioner Stopie said he had not checked up on Rancourt's testimony in the matter which ended the spectacular man hunt for Kaufman began last fall left little if any doubt that Rancourt had represented himself as a licensed guide.

As such Rancourt was quizzed repeatedly by relatives of Kaufman and by Maine officials concerning the disappearance of the Boston rubber magnate.

Albert H. Wechsler, brother-in-law of Kaufman, and treasurer of Converse Rubber Company in Malden, of which the missing man was president, was the one who learned that Rancourt was not licensed when he guided Kaufman.

2 INDICTED IN KILEY DEATH

The indictment of two men for the murder of James M. Kiley, Somerville filling station proprietor, was revealed in Somerville district court today by Police Capt. John A. Ray.

They were Edward Connaiy of Ibbetson st., Somerville, and James T. Garrick of Phillips st., West End. Lower court complaints against them were dismissed by Judge Sturtevant at the request of Capt. Ray.

Last Monday in Somerville court they pleaded not guilty to murder complaints, and asked for a lower court hearing.

Their cases were continued until today, but when called this morning both prisoners were absent. Capt. Ray then informed the court they had been indicted by the grand jury last week, and arraigned in Superior Criminal Court.

It is understood they were named in a number of the indictments handed down by the grand jury at East Cambridge last week.

M'LYMAN WILL CALL MAGRATH

Providence, May 11 (INS)—Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman today announced Dr. George Burgess Magrath, Boston pathologist, would be called as a government witness at the trial scheduled in Newport on June 8 of Elliott R. Hathaway, 38, of Fall River, indicted for the first degree murder of Miss Verna R. Russell, slain student nurse.

Dr. Magrath was present at the exhumation of the body of the strangled nurse and it was expected he would be asked to testify regarding his observations.

At the same time Atty.-Gen. McLyman denied he had received any written report on the exhumation from Dr. Magrath, although he said the pathologist had discussed the case with him orally several times. McLyman said Dr. Magrath prepared a report for Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley of Fall River, Mass., and he might receive a copy of it.

Here's One Lock That Even the Convicts Can't Pick

San Quentin Prison, Cal., May 11 (AP)—The men with the deftest fingers and sharpest ears in San Quentin were agreed today that Harold Marks, San Diego (Cal.) robber, serving a long term here, had perfected a theft-proof lock.

Marks' device is a key and dial combination rolled into one. The combination is set for a series of words, instead of numbers, and the key cannot be inserted until the proper words have been spelled. Revolving discs prevent picking.

WAR OPENED ON DANCE HALL RUM

A drive against "dance hall bootleggers" will be launched shortly in Greater Boston, prohibition enforcement officials revealed today.

The roundup will be directed particularly against bootleggers who cache their wares in flasks hidden in automobiles close to buildings in which public dances are being held.

A checkup of court records has been made, it was learned, involving cases of liquor selling in the vicinity of dance halls.

Co-operation of the proprietors and trustees of buildings in which such halls are located will be sought.

It is understood the danger that certain halls may be padlocked for a year unless co-operation is forthcoming, is being pointed out to owners.

The latest drive resulted from recent indictments in Federal court of fraternal organizations and social clubs for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act.

ONE MISSING IN LINER CRASH

Southampton, England, May 11 (AP)—The United States Shipping Board steamer, Wytheville, bound from Rotterdam to New York, arrived here during the night with a big hole in her bows and mast, trousers and bedding clinging to the twisted plates.

The vessel collided in a dense fog off the Isle of Wight with a French oil tanker, the Rhea. Two of the Rhea's crew were injured and one was reported missing.

Half of Town Goes on Daylight, Half on Old-Style Time

Woodstock, Ill., May 11 (AP)—You can take your own time in Woodstock.

Part of the town is operating on daylight saving time and part on standard time. The county clerk, for instance, uses daylight time but the circuit court clerk doesn't.

Stores catering to the farmer trade are sticking to standard time. The others aren't.

In other words, today is likely to be tomorrow and tomorrow may be today, depending on whose clock you happen to consult.

ONE KILLED IN GERMAN CLASH

Berlin, May 11 (AP)—Germany saw an unusual number of political clashes and fights over the week-end.

At Limbach, near Chemnitz, Communists attempting to ambush some Fascists mistook a truckload of returning Red Cross picknickers for the Nagis and opened fire, killing one and mortally wounding another.

There were other shootings and brawls between Communists and Fascists at Schwaderbach, Hornberg and Oldesburg.

Fontainbleau, France, May 11 (AP)—Reports that Infanta Beatrice, oldest daughter of the former King and Queen of Spain, is engaged to Antonio Alvaro d'Orleans, were called "absolutely untrue and ridiculous" today by a member of the royal household.

Shortly before the fall of the Spanish monarchy and the exile of the rulers it was rumored in court circles that the couple's marriage plans would be announced shortly.

Goliath Gets Gay With David and Is Again K.O.'d

Chicago, May 11 (AP)—There was reason today to believe that David still is a better man than Goliath.

The Goliath in this case is William Garrett, 34, owner of a rooming house. William weighs 220 pounds; his star boarder, David Harper tips the scales at 110.

"A good big man," said Mr. Garrett, "can knock off a good little man any time. I know because I used to be a good big preliminary fighter. I was a man-eating tiger. In fact they called me Goliath."

"I wish," replied David, "that I had me a good big heavyweight to sock. In fact I wouldn't care if his name was Goliath."

That's how the fight started. Women at Mr. Garrett's home screamed. Neighbors heard. Police called.

When they arrived Goliath had taken the count.

The chub was dressed in turn. It contained a perch weighing half a pound. Inside the perch was the minnow used for bait.

TAX EXEMPTION IS ATTACKED BY LONG

"There must be a tremendous restriction placed immediately on the tax exempt group," declared State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long today at a luncheon conference of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce in the Hotel Statler.

The conference was called today to determine what action might be taken by combined business men's organizations in the State to help bring about a reduction of municipal taxes and greater control by taxpayers over municipal expenditures.

Commissioner Long told the delegates that the present system of taxation "cannot go on very much longer."

"We ought to think in the terms," he said, "that every time a new proposition is made, we, at the same time, think about some way of getting the money to run it."

The commissioner warned that the list of tax exempt real estate cannot be added to much more, because of the millions of dollars that it withdraws from such tax exemptions.

At a business meeting which opened the conference, Samuel H. Thompson of Lowell was re-elected president; Judge James A. Halloran of Boston first vice-president; Alton D. Eden of Plymouth second vice-president, and John C. Robinson of Springfield, third vice-president.

A board of 19 directors was also elected, which will elect a secretary-treasurer.

except students, the faculty of Oxford and a few visiting British scientists. All the Oxford doorkeepers were needed to hold back the jam. Many escaped a headache that will never know it.

If you can locate your thinking in four-dimensional space and conceive an adjustment of that space to include electromagnetism, it will all be plain to you.

You meet with relativity in real life, for everything is relative, or comparative. Lady Godiva rode through the town dressed only in her hair, which at that time created more excitement than it would do now. One man, for peeping, lost his sight.

At Jammu City, India, 200,000 men and women crowded the streets when it was announced that the Maharanee of Kashmir would ride through the city with no veil on her face. No wife of a reigning prince had ever done that in India's history. Windows, sidewalks and roofs were packed with Hindus that could not believe their eyes.

In Hamlet you read "there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so." That applies to Godiva, and the Maharanee of Kashmir, also to Mohammedan women, collecting rose leaves for the manufacture of attar of roses in the Balkans long ago.

An American, the late Albert Brisbane, riding from Berlin to Constantinople, via Athens, on horseback, with two servants, early in the last century, observed that the women, working with bare faces, would instantly cover their faces with their skirts at the approach of strangers. This would not have been done in America, even by the most bashful, for that skirt was the only garment worn, by those women, below the waist.

Darwin tells you that Patagonian women, surprised in the open, would dash into their huts, put ornaments on their heads and then emerge, ready for all comers, wearing only the head ornaments, no other clothing.

It's all a matter of custom. Head hunters will exhibit their ghastly collections, convinced that you admire and envy them.

President Hoover, anxious to reduce expenses, asks army heads to recommend economies in army expenditure. If you had rabbits on the ground to defend you against eagles overhead, what importance would you attach to the rabbits? How many hundred million a year would you spend on their upkeep.

In the next war soldiers on the ground, with airplanes overhead, will be as valuable as so many rabbits.

Some troops are needed for police work, not many. The others are ornaments, except for the number needed to train recruits in war time. There will be no fighting by ground troops, on this soil.

The army could be cut down to police work and air forces with engineers for public works that could be used to train new soldiers, if need should arise. It is safe to predict that no second Woodrow Wilson will ever again undertake to ship three million Americans across the ocean.

KELLY IS CONFIDENT

City Councilor Francis E. Kelly of Ward 15, Dorchester, who boasts that he is the most independent member of the council, stated today that he is confident that he will be re-elected to that office next fall. Several candidates have already announced their intention of entering the field against him, but Frank is confident of re-election.

SOUTHIE MEN CONFIDENT

The South Boston twins, City Councillors "Bill" Lynch of Ward 9 and "Mike" Mahoney of Ward 6, are also confident of re-election next fall. They point with pride to many public improvements made in the district during the past year and a half and insist that they will do as well during the coming two years.

SUPPORT FOR ENGLERT

City Councillor "Eddie" Englert of Ward 11 has been promised the support of three political clubs in the vicinity of Eglesston sq. in his campaign for re-election to that office next fall.

MURPHY BUSY ON PLANS

Former Representative "Eddie" Murphy of Charlestown, is one of the most active members of the committee in charge of the Bunker Hill Day observance in that district. He is chairman of the sub-committee in charge of the banquet to be held in the Charlestown Armory on the evening of June 16 and is now busy making arrangements for the affair.

SETH IN TORONTO

State Fire Marshal John W Rath is attending the 39th annual meeting of the National Fire Protection Association in Toronto, Canada. The meeting will cover a period of a week.

G. G. A. TO HAVE CANDIDATE

It is rumored about City Hall that the Good Government Association plans to put a candidate in the field against City Councilor Seth Arnold of Ward 4, Back Bay, this fall.

PRIZES GOLD SEAL

DeWitt G. DeWolf, secretary to Governor Fuller, still wears conspicuously on his coat lapel the little gold seal of the Commonwealth presented to him by former Governor Frank G. Allen. Two days before Mr. Allen went out of office, he personally pinned the shield on DeWolfe's coat. It was a tribute to the DeWolf's principle of never tearing down one man to build up another.

PILGRIMAGES STARTED

The annual pilgrimage of school classes to the House and Senate galleries is now in full swing. In this way the pupils get an inkling on how the laws are made. Rep William P. Prendergast of Charlestown conducts many of the classes from his district around the State House after they leave the galleries.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best way to find advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

NOBLE CASE TO GRAND JURY

charging him with first degree murder.

It is understood Lynn cases will be presented first and the grand jury will hear evidence in local cases tomorrow. Herrmill officials have been instructed to be on hand Wednesday. It is believed a small number of witnesses will be called in the Noble case, including Medical Examiner Dr. Francis W. Anthony, Inspector Henry D. Casserly, who read part of the alleged confession in the arraignment in Herrmill court, and State Detective Richard J. Griffin. Griffin obtained the alleged confession from Noble.

Noble received a visit from his counsel Saturday night which lasted for an hour, with Attorney McCormick doing most of the talking.

BROTHER VISITS NOBLE

Yesterday the youth was visited by his brother James, with whom he laughed and joked as usual.

He attended chapel services, taking part lustily in the singing and listening intently to a sermon on Mothers' Day by Rev. John Arba March. Later Noble said guards he had enjoyed the services as much as on any Sunday since his confinement two months ago.

RENO DIVORCE LAW BRINGS IN BONANZA DAYS

one of a hundred similar doors—and behold, prohibition is dead. The same brass rail our fathers knew, the white-coated bartender with tetrouss bangs.

BONANZA DAYS

Reno, where one divorce is granted every five minutes, when the grist mill is running full blast, where two judges hand down 51 decrees and go fishing before sundown.

A pageant parade of this and that—the peroxide blonde in a too-tight skirt, a grizzled "desert rat" with burro and blankets, drifting in to try his luck.

Important citizens in shirt sleeves, tourists from Lake Tahoe in golf knickers and camera trappings. A former judge sick string tie and flowered waistcoat, holding forth at the bar (not of justice) on the subject of spiritual love.

FROM EVERYWHERE

For the "thundering" herd has come, thunereds upon hundreds of them, divorce seekers from every corner of the continent drawn by the magnet of Nevada's new six weeks' divorce law. The waitress from Doria, Ill., who blundered up to the altar with the rock instead of the handsome box boy. The school teacher from Topeka, Kan., who blundered twice and vows she never will support a husband again. The man from Ithaca, N. Y., who blundered home from a business trip with a powder puff in his pocket.

Jack Dempsey, ex-heavyweight champion of the world, here to divorce Estelle Taylor, Hollywood star—and dodging rumors that one minute have him shadow boxing in the smiles of Mrs. Ruth Dodd Burk Atlanta society favorite, and in the next sparring in the facial arena of Florence Rice Smith, daughter of a famous sports writer.

WHAT DEMPSEY SAYS

"Nothing in it," says Jack, arm in arm with Gov. Balzar of Nevada. Bill Graham, who runs "The Willows," and Jim McKay of Calneva fame, as they plan to open the Reno racetrack July 1—and bring back on July 4 the first 20-round prize fight held in these parts since the famous Jeffries-Johnson debacle of 1910.

MONEY ROLLS IN

"Keep the women out of the picture, I've had enough trouble," he warns a news photographer, as two young and fetching divorcees, both from Jersey City, try to squeeze into a snapshot of the ground-breaking ceremonies. For Reno is adding principals and horse racing to her triple play of open gambling, easy divorce and hard liquor.

The money is steadily rolling into the coffers of Washoe County in a golden stream. A county clerk, E. H. Beemer, chalks up $25 for every divorce recording filed. Every gambling house pays a steadily license fee to the town clerk. It is estimated that every divorce applicant leaves an average of $1000. The revenue is estimated at from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 a month.

The Chamber of Commerce sits up all night trying to answer correspondence that has increased 429 per cent since the new six weeks' residence law for divorces went into effect.

NEW GAMBLING DENS

Hotels, apartments and rooming houses are taxed to capacity—from tiny waffle shops to the grand cafe, every restaurant and lunch counter is doing a land office business and the hardware man who handles electric signs reports 100 orders—at an average of $300 each in the past two weeks.

Of these is "On the Northern," new [illegible] on the "Main Road" and "On the Waldorf" that opened Friday night.

Two new electric signs are being made for the "Grand Cafe." Another is being made for the "El Cortez Hotel."

"The Wine House" gambling place has been remodeled. The "Desuville" is reopening with improvements.

Reno is putting on a new front, at least until its own deflation of the "noble experiment" works out.

Two thousand divorce applicants are in town. The manager of the Riverside Hotel, famous divorce hostelry, reports every room taken. Requests for reservations have tripled, under the new law, he says.

Eighty per cent are from New York State, but Californians are coming into the fold now that the residence period is so convenient.

WOMAN DIES ON STREET

The body of a woman found slumped in a doorway in Eutaw st., East Boston, was identified early today at the Northern Mortuary as that of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Harrigan, 59, a widow, of Brooks st., East Boston.

Mrs. Harrigan was found by Leo Gentuso, of East Boston. He took her to the East Boston Relief Station, where death was ascribed to heart disease. She was identified at the hospital by her son, Lewis F. Harrigan.

Hit-Run Victim

SPANISH MOBS BURN CHURCHES

poured on woodwork and flames applied. All the monks escaped.

After the monastery had been fired, the rioters moved on to the Jesuit seminary in the center of Madrid. Gasoline again was poured on the woodwork, torches were put to the structures and the seminary, which is a college for priests, soon was a mass of flames.

INSTITUTIONS STONED

By this time other mobs were attacking numerous Catholic institutions hurling stones and brickbats and wielding iron bars to break doors and windows.

Firemen played hoses on the smoking ruins of Jesuit headquarters to keep the flames from spreading to nearby buildings.

While this was going on another mob poured into the suburb of Chamartin and set fire to the Jesuit school, which also was used as a residence for Jesuit priests. The four institutions previously burned were in the heart of Madrid.

SET UPON BY MOB

While the Jesuit seminary was still blazing the mob went on to the Franciscan school in the Cuatro Maminos quarter of Madrid and set that afire.

Most of the monks were led out by the police, but four of them fled by the back door. The mob set upon them but they fained shelter in a nearby building.

As twilight gathered smoke was rising from ten Catholic buildings fired by the mob.

Miguel Maura, minister of the interior, came out of the cabinet meeting which lasted all day and announced that the government would turn the city into an armed camp with barbed wire entanglements stretched in the streets and machine guns set up.

The cabinet ordered suspension of the Jesuit newspaper, Debate, during its emergency session.

The cabinet met in emergency session, for the situation was regarded as extremely grave.

Damaso Berenguer, former premier, who was released from a military prison only last Saturday, was clapped into jail again as the mob shouted criticism of the Republican government's leniency in his treatment.

Communists tried to promote a general strike this morning, and although the trades unions opposed them they did succeed in paralyzing traffic and disorganizing business in general.

TWO DEAD, MANY HURT

As the morning wore on there were fists fights, most of them between Communist orators talking up a general strike and Republicans who accused them of trying to discredit the new regime.

Impromptu parades formed here and there throughout the city and mounted police rode among the marchers, breaking up their ranks.

Baked Ham Proves Real Treat for Whole Family These Spring Days

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

What's that intriguing odor that's floating out of the Martha Lee kitchen? A ham baking, of course—the same ham that you see right up at the top of this page today. And it was pounced on by the office family before it had a chance to get cold.

While ham is good all the year 'round, spring and summer bring it fully into its own. With a whole or half ham in the ice box, mother feels insured against hot weather, unexpected company and impromptu picnics.

We harp so much on ham in this column that we feel positively sure that mother is going to choose her ham wisely—selecting the brand whose quality and fineness of flavor is always uniform. This ham comes to you with a perfect cure—just sweet enough—smoked enough—mild, uniform, and delicious. There's no need to parboil it before broiling or frying, because it's just right as is.

QUITE ECONOMICAL

And it's as economical as it is delicious. For instance, suppose you have purchased a half or a whole ham. Have the butcher cut a medium-thick slice from the center. Meanwhile, boil until tender, peel and slice them lengthwise into a greased baking dish. Moisten with maple flavored corn syrup and place a medium thick slice of the ham on top. Place in your broiler oven and broil until brown. Then turn the ham and broil on the other side and serve at once.

The shank should be covered with cold water, brought to a boil and simmered until tender, about 30 minutes to the pound, and 1 hour before it is done one-half dozen potatoes, a small head of cabbage cut in pieces, 4 cubed carrots, 3 small onions and a pint of string beans may be added. The ham is arranged in the center of a hot platter, with the vegetables around it.

For the Baked Ham illustrated today, we boiled our ham about 1½ hours, putting it on in cold water and letting it simmer. We let it cool in this water, then removed the skin and scored the fat diagonally with a knife. We placed the ham in the roaster and poured maple flavored corn syrup over it. (The white or dark corn syrup will do equally well, and sprinkled the ham with ground cloves. We also added ¼ cup vinegar to 1 cup of pineapple juice or other fruit syrup or diluted corn syrup to use for basting. We put the ham in a moderate oven, 350 deg., and baked it slowly for 2 hours.

DINING ROYALLY

And tomorrow you can think of the office staff dining royally on the Pea Soup that's already simmering with the shank end. And they do tell us that a piece of bread put in the kettle with this variety of soup will keep the peas from sinking to the bottom and burning.

Add a jar of our favorite prepared mustard, some broccoli, asparagus or spinach, candied sweet potatoes and watermelon pickle and there's a spring dinner that's as good to eat as it is good for you.

HAM AND CORN FRITTERS

1 cup minced cooked ham
1 can corn
1 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1½ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
2 eggs

Chop corn, drain and add dry ingredients mixed and sifted; then add ham and yolks of eggs, beaten until thick, and whites of eggs beaten stiff. Cook in frying pan in hot fat. Drain on paper. Serves six.

I've quite a collection of favorite ways of using ham left-overs if you're interested in having me send you a copy. I'd really love to. In fact, I'm just coaxing you to ask me.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

THIS HANDY HAM IS A HELP TO HURRIED HOUSEWIVES

After boiling two hours and cooling the ham in same water, remove the skin.

Next it is baked well with maple corn syrup, spices, vinegar and pineapple juice.

Prizes Totalling $100 Are Offered for Choicest of Banana Recipes

The United Fruit Company is interested to know how New England housewives are using bananas on their menus and so they are offering $100 in cash prizes for the Best Banana Recipes sent in between today, May 11, and Monday, June 1.

There are no strings of any kind on this contest—nothing to buy and no limit to the number of banana recipes that you can send in. We do ask though that you write only on one side of the paper and only one recipe on a sheet. And be sure that your name and address is on each sheet of paper sent in.

CONTEST CLOSES JUNE 1

Mail the recipes to the Banana Contest Editor, care of Martha Lee, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

The contest will close at noon on Monday, June 1.

One hundred dollars in cash will be distributed among those sending the six best recipes.

The First Prize will be $50, the Second Prize $25, Third Prize $10 and three $5 prizes. The names of the winners will be announced shortly after the close of the contest.

This contest is open to every housewife and homemaker in New England in the hope of producing some unusually fine banana recipes from the files of New England's famous cooks. And you have just as good an opportunity to win a prize as has your neighbor.

YOUR'S MAY WIN

Just because your favorite banana recipe may seem simple and not especially unusual doesn't mean that it may not be eligible as a prize winner in the contest. If your own family likes your way of cooking bananas then the recipe is certainly good enough to send in for a possible prize.

So start looking through your files for your best banana recipes and send them right along to the Banana Contest Editor, care of Martha Lee, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Sunshine in Malt Syrup

The sun seems to be shedding new light on breads and cereals these days and now its rays have penetrated malt syrup. S. E. Abrams, secretary and general manager of the Schlitz Co., tells us that an original process has been developed which adds the energy-giving value of sunshine to malt syrup.

"People have long known the value of sun rays as a stimulant to growth and health both in animal and plant life," says Mr. Abrams. "And now it is possible, through the efforts of chemists and research men, to seal the vital energy of sunshine right in the malt syrup cans."

Interesting to many, especially to homemakers who have discovered how this helpful malt syrup can be used in their bread and cookie making, as well as in other culinary lines.

Moxie Party a Big Success

I'm still thinking about the wonderful time I had out at the Moxie family party last Friday. Once in a while even a newspaper lady lays off her spectacles and shines up her evening slippers and mingles with the rest of the world as just a plain homemaker, instead of a household economist. The fun Friday made me wish these times came oftener.

Spring torrents certainly proved no damper on the Moxie family party. Over 1200 had arrived early in the evening. And what a grand time they all had—the fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers and sweethearts of the Moxie Associates.

First, the interesting inspection tour through the "world's finest bottling plant," in full operation, then the most generous assortment of ices and cakes I've been tempted by in many a moon and for the rest of the evening dancing to Billie Boyle's Copley-Plaza Orchestra.

They were all there, from Arthur Fanny's 83-year young mother to the well-behaved kiddies. And every one having one grand and glorious time. To many the chief attraction may have been the marvelous machinery of the immaculate plant, but to me the outstanding feature was the honest-to-goodness friendliness, harmony and loyalty among Frank Archer's "boys and girls." His ears should burn from all the fine things I heard his "big family" saying about him and Frank, Jr.—And when your own family says nice things about you, it means something, doesn't it?

My only regret was that, due to the downpour, I couldn't take a turn around the parking space on the Moxie Rolls Royce horse. I suppose my family would have me X-rayed above the ears if I did anyway; but you can't stop me from wishing!

Sunday Dinner Menu

THIS WEEK'S LESSON in the Martha Lee Cooking school included a complete Sunday dinner from the tomato juice cocktail through the broiled sirloin steak, mushroom sauce, French fried onions, asparagus loaf, pineapple, marshmallow and strawberry salad and hermits. Sound good to you? A copy will go promptly to you if you will send a loose two-cent stamp to Martha Lee.

New Style for Sandwiches

The Martha Lee Cooking School was no place for the careful calorie counter this week. In addition to the complete Sunday dinner which Martha Lee cooked and served, each member of the class was served a sandwich made from a famous Swedish health bread (or the new raisin and nut bread of the same brand), with a filling of Squire's daisy roll or baked luncheon loaf.

This luncheon loaf is excellent, also sliced and warmed up in butter for breakfast or minced with the scrambled eggs, and it is priceless for sandwiches. Try it baked with macaroni and as a stuffing for peppers or tomatoes mixed with rice or bread crumbs and a little gravy or cream.

It is the product of a famous plant kept more scrupulously clean than even your own home kitchen could possibly be. These products which, by the way, are made from New England dressed fresh pork, also include pure pork sausage, frankforts, bologna, tongue and meat loaf, jellied luncheon tongue, pressed cooked meat, minced luncheon specialty, pimento sandwich meat, head cheese, tastiloaf, Polish sausage and liver sausage.

Tasty Raisin Nut Bread

It looked as if the whole Martha Lee Cooking School was going on a picnic this week, judging from the loaves of Swedish Raisin Nut Loaf and Health Bread piled on the demonstration table. It was a get-acquainted party through the courtesy of Mr. Frank Gentile, in honor of his new raisin nut loaf.

It is one of the nut breads that you don't have to look for the nuts with a spy glass and it is baked every Friday over in Mattapan so that it is all nice and fresh for your week-end company. And if you have some left over, which I don't believe you will, you will find it mighty good for breakfast toast or French toast. Dr. Allyn of the famous Westfield Testing Laboratories says, "This Swedish Health Bread is a fine textured, dark bread that keeps fresh, tasty and moist an exceptionally long time. It is a product of outstanding nutritive value."

202 Week-End Drunks

Drunkenness arrests during the week-end were considerably higher than usual, with 202 persons taken into custody for this offense.

Miss Smithers Is Engaged to Hitchcock

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, May 11 (US)—The weekend brought tidings of a most interesting engagement—pretty Marie Louise Smithers is to become the bride of Charlie Hitchcock, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hitchcock and nephew of that socially consequent lady, Mrs. S. Hinman Bird of this city.

A formal announcement of the betrothal was made yesterday afternoon at a reception and tea given by Marie Louise's mater, Mrs. C. Francis Smithers, in Greenwich, Conn.

PRESENTED IN 1929

Marie Louise, who was presented to society at a brilliant dinner-dance given on December 26, 1929, at Sherry's, is a daughter of the late Charles Smithers, and her grandfather, the late Francis Sidney Smithers, was a well known banker. Through her mother, the former Marie L. Dammann of Memphis, Tenn., the bride-to-be is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dammann and a great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Pryor Siler of Arkansas.

Before her introduction to society Marie Louise attended Mrs. Randall's school and also Miss Porter's exclusive institution of learning in Farmington, Conn.

STUDIED AT ANNAPOLIS

"Charlie" Hitchcock, since the death of his parents, has made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Bird in this city and at Wildfield Lodge, in Narragansett Pier. His grandfather, the late Dr. Charles Hitchcock, was an eminent physician in his day.

After attending the Pomfret school, "Charlie" studied at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. He was a member of the class of 1932.

While no definite date has been announced for the wedding, I suspect Marie Louise and "Charlie" will be "Mrs. and Mrs. Hitchcock" before the close of the coming summer season.

Between You And Me

—By The Colyumist—

MOTHER'S DAY SPECIAL

All the water in the hose couldn't revive a large white cat taken from a burning building the other night. People turned away from the bedraggled form lying in the road, then the rescuer brought out a squealing, squalling kitten, put it beside the mother. Instantly she leaped up and practically did a dance around the mite.

Most every child came out of the circus with a cracking, bronco-busting whip. Why should dainty little girls choose such implements. Perhaps they are taking the whip hand young?

WHAT'S LEFT FOR WE RICH?

With gardenias at parfare price, what is left for the millionaire's lady to flaunt? We even heard that orchids were 10 cents, too, just for a day!

WHOA OR WHOOPEE?

Three o'clock in the morning we were awakened by jingling bells. We rushed to the window to see a buggy seating a driver and a man in high silk hat. Were they seeing Nellie home? Will Nellie please write in and give us a chance to ride, too?

KOUSSEVITZKY'S COAT TAILS

It was the man's first attendance at a Symphony. He watched as though spellbound. At intermission the woman next him asked just what he thought of such grand music. "What I'm wondering is who his tailor is. Not once during his conducting have his coat tails moved. It's marvelous."

Dr. K can discourse at length on the fit of clothes. Just what does Dr. K mutter while he's conducting? Sit in the last seat, by the door, in the last gallery and watch and try to interpret the waving of his mouth. It's a good game and lends itself to an exciting contest during dull numbers, if any.

RANGOES

A woman in Concord, owning a lovely home furnished with valuable antiques, always vowed that she would never sub-let. Prior to a long trip, however, her brother talked her out of her resolve. She made arrangements with a very charming lady to leave the house in her care. Coming home unexpectedly, she found the woman to be owner of four man-size monkeys. The monkeys were allowed full run of the house during the day and chained, bit or miss, to those swell antiques for the night!

AROUND AND ABOUT

Maybe it's efficiency, maybe ingenuity, or even perhaps just friendly helpfulness, that leads a man who runs a swan boat to lend umbrellas should you be caught between the raindrops. Boston is the only place of two which sports or supports swan boats. The other is in Europe . . . Boston will soon be losing its reputation for "queerness" if signs like this continue to appear on soda fountains: "Moron glace, twenty cents" . . . There's an apartment in Boston which has recently been reclaimed . . . the deed dates back to one of the early Governors . . . it used to be a farmhouse. The house itself, on Allen Place, has many unused architectural gadgets, such as double central stairways . . . Bill McLeod has the "I'm a Little String Around Your Finger method beaten a mile. He puts a golf ball in his vest pocket. It's inconspicuous, a slight bulging but he keeps it there until the errand is done and release is his.

Color Zest Should Be Definite

By ANN ARDEN

GOUPY HAD the idea of making a polka dot silk jacket to go with a plain silk skirt. She did the thing quite regularly until it came to the sleeves and . . . she made them quarter length so that the coat would be a simply perfect one for summer wear.

WHEN YOU go shopping these next few weeks—do it with a definite zest for color! And if you choose navy blue, one of the soft new grays, even beige or black—be a bit reckless in your accessories by selecting them in bright scarlet.

THE THREE-PIECE rajah costume pictured has distinction in its color contrast. The skirt is black and slightly circular. The blouse is white, worn over the skirt in vest effect, and marked by black buttons, as centers on the stitched design trim. The jacket is red rajah, dotted in white, the three-quarter sleeves revealing the blouse sleeve, black button piping continuing the blouse treatment, black patent leather belt at waistline. The bag is black and silver, the one-strap pumps black patent; while the black straw sailor hat has shallow round crown, and becoming cloche brim.

THERE IS just about no end to the individuality and the wearability of the jacket-dress. If you have a skirt and coat to match with several blouses to fit various occasions, you have a wardrobe that fits you for anything. Or perhaps you can have one coat that goes well with two dresses or more. Since this is the year to express your individuality more than any year in the past, the jacket-dress would, of course, come to the fore to make chic and individuality the same or equal qualities.

* * *

BLOUSES ARE the salvation of the whole scheme of modern dressing. With one blouse and another the change about process becomes an easy and entertaining thing to accomplish. And while there are all sorts and types and colors of blouses, the white ones are usually the more satisfactory ones as well as the smartest, and the best effect in this matter of color contrast with white.

* * *

ANY SUIT, be it white or any of the colors, is far handsomer when accompanied by one of the new blouses. The fact is that often a suit that is decidedly inexpensive can be made to look like a million dollars by the addition of an exquisite hand-made blouse.

Listening Post

MANY EARDRUMS experienced a sensation and more than a few eyebrows lifted in wonderment at 11:45 Saturday night. It was when John (WEE) Holbrook said good-night . . . and GOOD-BYE! Sure enough, he said it the second time, and there seemed to be a slight catch in his voice. Following much rumor and equal secrecy, his departure is finally made known. Today, the deep, rich voice is being transmitted from microphones of NBC at 711 Fifth ave. in New York. John follows other Boston announcers, namely, Howard Petrie, John S. Young and Edward Cashman, all now feeding chain hookups. His thousands of New England admirers naturally regret having him go, but feel sure he is to distinguish himself there, as he has here. Little doubt but what he will. An revoir and good luck, Jack!

On the Air

MUSIC LOVERS will not want for engaging harmonies tonight. From WNAC at 8:30, Leocrecia Bori, Metropolitan Opera star and internationally known soprano, will sing a program of the world's best beloved music. A concert orchestra directed by Wilfred Pelletier will accompany Miss Bori in her recital which ranges from opera selections to fireside favorites . . . Russia's great composer, Tschaikowsky, will be represented exclusively by the Rochester Civic orchestra over WBZA at 10. Included on the program is the March from the "Nutcracker Suite" and the glamorous "1812 Overture."

IN A DECIDEDLY lighter vein Lois Bennett, soprano will serenade the Revelers when she sings "I Want to Marry a Male Quartet," o'er WEEI at 9:30. The Revelers will spurn the bigamous offer for they learn by it's "European tour after the program Concertos have been comp for violins, cellos and flutes and saxophones, but who ever heard of a concerto written for the ukulele? Don Becker, WLOE staffman, has done the deed with his Invitious creation of "Indigo Moon," to be played by the Rhythm Makers over the WEAF loop at 10:30 this eve . . . Tennis as principal N. E. exponents will be discussed by Arthur Lee Mond on WBZA at 6:08 tonight.

A VISIT at WBZA produces thus: John Holbrook and his last "WBZ, WBZA and WIXAZ" yest'y; he leaves for N. Y. to take up announcerial duties on the WJZ network. And still another 'BZ announcer enters N. Y. radio this week—William W. Lundell . . . John Clark, program chief, is sporting a Barney Google mustache and John, Jr. thinks he's a bogey man . . . Bill Williams gives a grand imitation of a crowing rooster.

HENRY BURBIG, Italian boy with the Jewish dialect, will be back on the air May 23 with a series of burlesqued fables . . . Other oncoming b'dcasts: President Hoover three times during the last ten days of May; the Prince of Wales, May 21; Ramsay MacDonald, May 23—M. G. M.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Postponed hearings on the Port of Boston rate differential case, which opened here in Boston before examiners of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be resumed at the New York Chamber of Commerce tomorrow.

New York railroad's free lighterage is the basis for the contention between the Port of Boston and the Port of New York which government officials will decide.

The City of Boston and the Boston Port Authority, who are leading the local fight, with the backing of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Foreign Commerce Club and other harbor groups, ask that this free lighterage service given by the railroads in the Port of New York, with which the Port of Boston cannot compete, should cease.

NEW LINE

First steamer of a newly established monthly service planned to and from the Port of Boston is due to arrive here Thursday, when the San Clemente of the Boston-Pacific Coast Intercoastal Service of the Quaker Line arrives at the Army Base Terminal, South Boston. Plans are for the San Vincente to come here June 15 and the Jefferson Myers on July 20, C. H. Sprague & Son, Inc., of Broad st., are New England agents.

BOSTON TO PACIFIC

Direct sailing from the Port of Boston to Pacific coast ports, which will shorten the time in travel to the West Coast, will be started here by the Isthmian Lines with the S. S. Ensley, which arrives at the Army Base in time to sail June 4, it is announced by Norton & Lilly Co., of 131 State st., agents of the line here in Boston.

AYRES GIVEN NEW CONTRACT AND SALARY BOOST BY UNIVERSAL

Lew Will Make "Heaven and Earth" and "The Baby-Faced Killer"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1931, Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, May 11.—I am beginning to see now why Lew Ayres, fan mail is increasing every week. Lew isn't just a silly youngster, made successful overnight by a trick of Fate. He has really got something. I realized that when I interviewed him on the radio.

He is intelligent and unusually sensible for a kid of 22. He wasn't getting enough money at Universal in proportion to the receipts on his pictures and he held out until he got an increase in salary.

Louella O. Parsons

Last week he and Carl Laemmle, Jr., went to the Embassy for lunch. There were other Universal officials present. Lew announced what he thought he was worth and to his delight everyone agreed with him. He was then given a five-year contract with a pleasant increase in salary. His first picture under the new contract is "Heaven and Earth."

"Following "Heaven and Earth" he will make "The Baby-Faced Killer." His favorite picture is "Doorway to Hell" so this time I number ought to please him.

HOW WELL I remember the first time I ever saw a screen test of Paul Muni. Winfield Sheehan invited me to look at a test of this great Jewish actor in a dozen different characterizations. I remarked at the time that I thought it was the greatest acting I had ever seen in the talkies. The talkies were very new then. For some reason, Mr. Muni didn't particularly click. Now it looks as if he will be back again. Howard Hawks and Ben Hecht have gone to New York to find an actor to play the title role of "Scarface," the next Howard Hughes picture, and Paul Muni has been approached for the job. "Scarface" will go into production June 1.

IT ALMOST SEEMS as if the talking version of "The Dove" is fated. Here it has been postponed again in favor of "The Bird of Paradise." Dolores Del Rio, who will be starred in the "Dove," later on, will have the same role in "The Bird of Paradise" that Lenore Ulric created on the stage. Lenore furnished an exotic characterization of great interest at the time "The Bird of Paradise" was produced. I cannot say whether or not there will be the same interest for we have new grown accustomed to Hawaiian music and scenery and "The Bird of Paradise" was the first play of this type. It will probably be fall or early winter before "The Dove" reaches the screen.

"THE COHENS AND KELLYS" are going to bring their comedy right into Hollywood. We have had all sorts of Hollywood exposes, Hollywood dramas and Hollywood so-called burlesques, but we have never had anything like "The Cohens and Kellys" turned loose at the studios. Charlie Murray and George Sidney will play their regular roles in this sixth edition of the series, to be called "The Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood." Al Dumond, who wrote the first of the series, will supervise. This ought to be a good one.

THE ANXIETY and worry that Clara Bow has endured these last few months is telling on her now. At 2 o'clock the other night she called Rex Bell, unable to sleep, fearing something had happened to him or to her father. Perhaps she knew a little earlier that day that Daisy De Voe, the secretary who has caused the motion picture actress so much grief, made an attempt to see her. Miss De Voe went to the home of Miss Bow's housekeeper to ask how Clara was and said:

"Do you think she would like to see me?" The housekeeper, thinking she meant it sarcastically, said: "Oh, I am sure she would." Miss De Voe turned around and said: "I will go right over to the hospital now."

We haven't heard whether she kept her word or not, but one thing is certain, she would never have gotten beyond the front door of the sanitarium.

WHAT WITH Adela Rogers St. John and Laura Hope Crewes both in New York talking business to Gloria Swanson the chances are that Gloria will be announcing her return to the coast any day now. Adela was sent to New York by Samuel Goldwyn to see the play, "Twenty or Never," which has been purchased for Gloria. I announced that some months ago in this column after I had luncheon with Miss Swanson and she told me Mr. Goldwyn had bought the Belasco play for her. Adela has been writing a number of adaptations lately.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: CORINNE GRIFFITH quoting a bridge authority while she played. MRS. GEORGE ARCHAINBAUD, who recently attended a lecture on contract bridge, coaching CORINNE from the next table. EILEEN PERCY without any bridge lessons, winning also. WALTER MOROSCO, MAE MURRAY, always picturesque and interesting, dropping in for chat with friends at the Brown Derby. ROLAND YOUNG at the same place autographing his book, "Not for Children," for a friend who is learning the Spanish patio at the Ambassador. Mrs. Charles Murray, who is one of Hollywood's most beautiful women. An argument at the Embassy between friends as to whether RICARDO CORTEZ'S recent success had or had not changed him. Five out of six persons decided that Ricardo Cortez was a different person. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Two Screen Classics at Fine Arts

By HARRIS MORGAN

"Troika," sharing the Fine Arts screen this week with "Metropolis," runs the emotional gamut, boasts the bewitching personality of Olga Chekhova, and proves a first-class melodrama, done with the directorial hand of a master. The Fine Arts bill, from the standpoint of camera skill, proves one of the finest pictures shown we have ever seen within the limits of a single afternoon.

Threaded with an intensely human and profoundly stirring story, "Troika" is a revelation of good acting by principals and "extras" alike. It has all the elements of good entertainment; and—surprising when one considers the usual continental type where no concessions are made to the American box office idea—it is chock full of situations along the Hollywood line. The difference is, that they are superior in ever way, barring alone the overfondness for detail and wanton characterization. The plot is beautiful in tone and treatment; and the humor is admirably achieved.

Of a steller cast, Mme. Chekhova strikes the American eye as one of the best of all sirens of the screen.

"Metropolis," five years old, is a marvel of camera achievement still. It is miles ahead of Hollywood and, though some of its "meller" situations are outmoded, the picture has vast power to entertain and remains one of the truly great works wherein the director's theme is perfectly told in lights and shadows.

The Fine Arts show is all quality motion picture; and there is abundance of melodrama to tease the tonsils of the most avid American fan.

STAR ADDS TO LAURELS

Snappy Acts on Scollay Bill

The new seven-act stage show at the Scollay today features the well known vaudevillian, Harry Stanley, with his company in a comedy, singing and dancing act called "The Hokiter." Stanley is assisted by four winsome and talented young ladies who sing and dance. Also on this new vaudeville bill are the Four Bachelors, billed as "Unusual songsters of unusual songs"; the Four Aalbu Sisters with Allen Reno in "Youth, beauty and talent"; the Kelo Brothers in a special comedy skit "All in Fun"; Connie Mitchell called the inimitable mimic"; Fred Harper and company in a special sketch "The Promoter" featuring "Romanoff" middleweight champion wrestler of the world; Ferry "The Frog."

Notables Fill News Films

The current issue of Hearst Metrotone News at Loew's State features a series of interesting world events. A blazing oil well is shown that resulted in the death of nine workers and menaced a large district at Ladewater, Tex. The Prince of Wales and his brother, George, again find their way into the news as they stop off at Lisbon on their way home from their South American tour. Filmed at great risk, Metrotone presents an awe-inspiring spectacle in the form of the Majestic Victoria cataract in the wilds of Rhodesia.

Other scenes included Hawaiian troops at inspection parade, the beginning of the "Wild West" season at Saugus, Cal., where thrill after thrill is experienced, and a bombing squadron of fliers use luscious pineapples for target practice over the Pacific ocean.

In the issue at the Orpheum ex-Governor Al Smith of New York inaugurates that city's newest wonder, the Empire State Building, with the aid of his grandchildren. Governor Roosevelt and other celebrities aid in the pompous ceremonies. Our own Wellesley College girls again gather the spotlight as they were photographed after their class caps had been forgotten and they joined together to enjoy the traditional spring carnival.

Other items include another thrilling bike race with its customary spills, the King of Siam in his talkie debut, the Japanese conception of our great national game of baseball and a match between Londos and Steele.

Will Rogers on Screen at the Bowdoin Square

There is another entertaining bill at the Bowdoin Square. That clever humorist, Will Rogers, appears in "A Connecticut Yankee." Another fine film bears the title "Lonely Wives," a story of a man who strayed from the narrow path but who later paid the price. The outstanding members in the cast are: Edward Everett Horton, Esther Ralston, Laura LaPlant and Patsy Ruth Miller. The vaudeville offers four Dancing Demons, Lieut. Eldredge in sand pictures, Denton Mace, master of ceremonies, Harry Dunham, piped boy, Hedder and Emslee, classy duo, Silver Slipper Girls, May Watson, vocalist.

Benefit at Tremont on Wednesday Night

The performance of George M. Cohan in "Friendship" at the Tremont on Wednesday evening will find a brilliant assemblage of prominent Bostonians on hand, with the entire house taken over by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club as benefit performance. Mrs. Barratt Wendell heads the committee in charge of the affair.

Doctor Rockwell Scores Triumph as Headliner on Keith-Boston Bill

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Every day, in every way, you'd get better and better, if you could always have Dr. Rockwell do the blues chasing. That master of clowning, sure-fire for gales of laughter in any house in the land, is the headliner at the RKO Boston this week, so much of a triumph in his line that he leaves a fair movie mirth-producer, "Virtuous Husbands," far to the rear, for the laurels.

The film turns out to be our old friend of the "legit," "Apron Strings," which proved good entertainment along the Rialto a year or so ago. Its story, one with novel twists and bright with humor, is probably too recently familiar to need the telling. Never heavy but always frothy, it boasts some unusual situations. Outstanding is the cast, capable youth, Elliott Nugent, who is seen as Daniel Curtis, the rich chap who lacks imagination and gets into numerous scrapes as a result and the actor's father, C. Norman, stage veteran, is corking good. Tully Marshall is fine and Allison Skipworth is very amusing. Betty Compson and Jean Arthur are pleasing in their roles.

Elliott Nugent

The "Old Doc" is one of the funniest fellows that vaudeville ever does send to town. None can resist his scalpel of merriment, for his manner and words are anti-toxin to all human gloom. Always a scream, he is a riot of comedy this time, keeping the house in roars of laughter, so fast is his line of patter and antics. Whether he is whistling—and he does it well, too—or snipping the gown from the lady dancer—a high water mark of humor—Doctor Rockwell is stellar, and we enjoyed him more than any gentleman of variety in many moons.

The whole Boston show is classy. Backing up the Rockwell comic highlights are clever artists in dancing features: Yvonne Monoff and the Ed Sisters in "The Hollywood Rush," and Cass and Lehn, aided by Miss Georgette; Morgan and Stone in "Stringing Along," and Victoria and Lorens in "On Deck."

We wouldn't have missed Rockwell for a good deal; he is a whole show in himself.

Real Ranch Comedy in Film

Hilarity rules on the screens at the Modern and Beacon this week. The feature is "Dude Ranch," guaranteed to get the laughs. Brisk direction, bright dialogue and breezy acting combine to make the movie a very merry one.

Jack Oakie and Eugene Pallette are cleverly cast, the latter doing even better than the star. They are supposed to be running a troupe having Mitzi Green and others; and to make the mars go, they sign up with a dude ranch to impersonate wild and woolly Westerners, whose purpose in life is to give the tenderfeet from the East a thrill or two.

As long as the movie stays burlesque, it is fine entertainment; but it ends weakly by descending into attempted melodrama. But just the same it gets the laughs. June Collyer is the heroine.

"Arizona"

PRIVATE RITES FOR MICHELSON FUNERAL

Pasadena, Cal., May 11 (AP)—The body of Dr. Albert A. Michelson, who died here Saturday, will be buried at Mountain View Cemetery, Altadena, late Tuesday or Wednesday under plans subject to change after arrival of two daughters enroute here.

The daughters are Mrs. Philip Maher of Chicago and Mrs. Reginald Foster of Dahlgreen, Va.

Services attended only by members of the family and possibly a few close friends will be held at the modest residence where the famed physicist practically completed work supplementing his prior computation of the speed of light.

Services will be in charge of Dr. Theodore G. Soares, pastor of the Union Liberal church. At the residence today it was said that "no press notices of Dr. Michelson's funeral are desired."

Prof. Einstein Pays Michelson Tribute

Oxford, Eng., May 11 (AP)—Prof. Albert Einstein today expressed his sorrow at the death of Prof. Albert Michelson whom he once character ized as the man who inspired in him the concept of the theory of relativity.

"Dr. Michelson was one of the greatest artists in the world of scientific experimentation," he said. "His investigations were of decided significance to the theory of relativity."

Dr. Einstein is here to deliver a series of Rhodes memorial lectures.

FILM STAR ROW TO BE AIRED

Hollywood, May 11 (INS)—Hollywood's much discussed "Battle of the Stars" in which Lilyan Tashman, film actress, was reported to have scratched, kicked and beaten Miss Alpha Marlowe, 23-year-old actress, on a studio lot, was scheduled for a "retake" in the Los Angeles city prosecutor's office today.

Deputy City Prosecutor W. C. Reynolds said he wanted to hear all the dialogue and have the action described in detail before deciding whether he would issue a complaint against Miss Tashman at the request of Miss Marlowe.

Miss Tashman, wife of Edmund Lowe, film actor, found Miss Marlowe resting in Lowe's bungalow dressing room on the studio lot May 1, Miss Marlowe said. Joseph Marchetti, attorney for Miss Marlowe, declared she was severely kicked and beaten. Milton Cohen attorney for Miss Tashman and Lowe, asserted it was "only an argument."

Most of the workers were out of the mine shortly afterward, and all have been accounted for.

Other indictments were returned by the Greene County grand jury against two of Diamond's lieutenants, Paul Quattrochi and Jerry Scaccia. The former was charged with extortion and unlawful entry. Scaccia had four indictments recorded against him, two charging kidnaping and the others assault and charges of carrying weapons.

The indictments were returned in connection with the alleged kidnaping and torture of George Parks by Diamond and members of his gang.

KING WILL SOON BE ABLE TO SEE

Purchase, N. Y., May 11 (INS)—The world was dark to the King of Siam today, but light was around the corner.

His Majesty, who travelled halfway around the globe for an American operation on his left eye for the removal of a cataract, was reported resting comfortably with every indication that the delicate operation would turn out favorably.

The absolute King of Siam today was under orders from a group of eminent American specialists headed by Dr. John M. Wheeler, who performed the operation.

FUND TRUSTEES IN TRIBUTE TO G. E. PHELAN

Resolutions lauding the services and personal characteristics of the late George Edward Phelan, manager of the George Robert White fund from 1922 to 1930, were adopted by the trustees of the fund at a meeting May 5.

In part the resolutions follow:

"To no more careful, better trained, or more sympathetic hand than his could have been committed the detailed appropriations of the munificent resources, and the advancement of the high and generous purposes of the White Fund. He knew the life of this great city, its tragedies, its sufferings and its joys. He had high faith in its happy and prosperous future. He gave quick ear to the cry of the children, and through the opportunity of the service of his later days, he became their foster parent, their friend and their protector. The greater vigor of mind and body of the rising generation of our city youth will rear living and lasting testimony to his foresight, and his sincere humanities, revealed in his most accomplished, supreme, and, as inexorable fate decreed, last life work.

HE KNEW PEOPLE

"He studied and knew the characteristics, the temperaments, of each of the many communities making up our complex metropolitan life. He learned the habits of thought and the traditions of the later comers to our shores. He knew how, through intelligent kindliness, to gain their confidence, and how to promote their better domestic hygiene, without intruding upon their family privacies, or impairing their self-respect by ostentatious charities.

"His counsels at our board meetings were safest guides toward the realization of the humane purposes of the founder of our trust, in providing for the teaching and maintenance of the benefits of healthful childhood, and safeguarding the cradle from the perils of infantile disorders and disease.

"None of us will ever forget his cheery, breezy speech, his spirited gracious presence that infused into our official deliberations something of his own happiness in the promotion of what was to him a singularly exalted public service.

LED HIS FELLOWS

"We never knew that he had thought for himself. His own cares and anxieties incident to every human life, he carried in his own heart, nor asked others to bear them with him. Bravely, and with head erect, he mingled with and led his fellows in response to every call of true patriotism, in war as in peace. In the seclusion of his own courage and with a splendid and unfaltering fortitude, he resting to the last the inevitable and inexorable progress of an ailment that brought him into the valley of the shadow of death on the 20th day of May, in the year 1930, yet that shadow lifts and passes in the eternal light of his good deeds, and of his faith, and ours."

Lewis, appointed master in the case by Judge James R. Carroll of the Massachusetts Supreme Court. The case will go to trial in Boston.

Ralph Capone on Trial

INSANITY PLEA BY CROWLEY TO ESCAPE CHAIR

New York, May 11 (AP)—When Francis Crowley goes to trial for the murder of Patrolman Frederick Hirsch, his attorneys will attempt to save him from the electric chair by pleading insanity.

Charles R. Weeks, appointed by the court to represent the 20-year-old confessed killer, said today he would ask the appointment of Dr. J. Ramsay Hunt, alienist, to examine Crowley.

Weeks conferred with Dist. Atty. Edwards of Nassau county, in charge of the prosecution, and announced that he was "seriously considering" a fight for a change of venue.

He said public opinion in the metropolitan district had been "so inflamed" against Crowley that a fair trial seemed almost impossible.

Dist. Atty. Edwards said he would resist any attempt at an insanity plea. He pointed out that Crowley already had been examined by Dr. Amos S. Gregory, Bellevue Hospital psychiatrist, who declared him responsible for his acts.

Patrolman Hirsch was shot to death in North Merrick, L. I., last week when he identified Crowley

The farewell party thrown for at Ray Dower's house in West Hartford the night before I came to Boston.

THINGS WE LIKED

Here are a few of the things that have tickled our fancy over the week-end: Niela (Mayfair) Goodelle singing "Now You're In My Arms" . . . the storm scenes in "Dirigible" at the Majestic . . . Niela Goodelle singing "Sam and Delilah" . . . Dr. Rockwell's insane nonsense at the Keith-Boston . . . Niela Goodelle singing "But Not for Me" . . . Ann Sutter in her comedy songs at the Gayety . . . Niela Goodelle singing "My Ideal" . . . "The Public Enemy" at the twin Publix houses—a swell picture . . . Niela Goodelle.

Ed Young, the Yankee Philosopher, knows a gal who is so dumb that she thinks Sandino is a golf hazard at Sandy Burr.

SUBWAY CINDERALLA

Al: Now I know how they meet them guys . . . And I thought I was smart, living up on the hill . . . never having to use the subways . . . well, hardly ever . . . Miss Prim, who does use subways, saw this with her own eyes . . . 'Twas a few minutes before nine and a young woman with extremely high heels was ascending the subway stairs . . . Suddenly, one heel (whether by accident or design) flew off and while she stood poised helplessly on one foot, it (the heel) was neatly caught by a young man below . . . probably a member of the varsity nine . . . He returned the heel to its owner and the last Miss Prim saw of them they were going off together . . . And probably lived happily ever after. A. L. L.

Query: Is there anything smoother than a cab-driver WITH a farm and anything more servile than a cab-driver WITHOUT a fare?

THE MORNING MAIL

Art Lea Mead: Thanks for remembering me. I'll see you at the match. . . . L. Resnikoff and Abe Margolis, Boston: I can use all of that sort of stuff that you've got. And many thanks. . . . K. D. N., Medford: Thanks. Will use it later in the week. Come again.

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

All of the Met ads have been changed over to read "Kick In' With Clara Bow" instead of "Clara Bow in 'Kick In,'" as they were originally drawn up . . . The unfavorable publicity she'd been getting is the cause of it all . . . Incidentally Clara had just returned from a three weeks' vacation when she collapsed . . . Texas Guinan is lining up all of the good looking girls from the other N. Y. night clubs to take them over to Paris with her . . . Al Capone has bought a ranch in California . . . Fred (Three's a Crowd") Allen, who spends most of his spare time writing acts for other comedians, drops a line to this department to report that he has been so busy that he has been afraid to open a window in his room for fear that some pigeon that had been on the bill with him somewhere would light on the window-sill and ask him (Allen) to write an act for him (the pigeon) . . . N. Y. to Boston bus drivers have a signal to let one another know that the road is o. k.—free from cops, etc.—When approaching each other during the daytime they toot their horn three times . . . At night they snap their lights on and off quickly . . . Mrs. Donald McElwain, the former Augusta Converse, of Beacon Hill is in Reno and everyone is wondering why?

WOMAN IS FINED $25 AFTER BATTLING 3 MEN

THOROUGHBREDS

"TOT" WARREN'S EYES BORE A DIFFERENT LOOK

FIVE FEET, even, in her stockings.

Blue eyes—the sparkling kind of blue that is in April skies.

Crinkly black hair and the contrasting fair skin that tells of ancestral trams going back to the Norman French.

Lithe and slender she seemed, almost like a boy, and yet with one of those figures showing rippling curves. She stood by the wooden rail of at keeps the public back from the thoroughbreds in the paddock.

Trip Tierney saw her as "Buss" Warren patted him on the shoulder, gave him a leg up into the saddle, and then ran an appraising hand along the fleeting muscles under the satin coat of "Featherstone." "Tip" had looked into the faces of hundreds of girls at this and other tracks during the four years he'd been "contract boy" for the Rose Hill Stables.

He'd accepted their obvious hero-worship as part of his due as top rider of the country, two years hand running. He'd flirted with some, ignored others, but held fast to his creed of never letting anything in skirts attract more than that passing interest such as a sailor gives to a pretty girl in a port away from home.

But something in "Tot" Warren's eyes was different.

Something made him smile into those eyes—not his "store smile" of supercilious condescension, as most of the girls he deigned to notice got, but a real and genuine grin of friendly feeling.

Swung Into Line
Horses on the Runway

One by one the horses swung into line according to their numbers, prancing, skittering, dancing on their lead-out boys clung to bridle chains and took them down the runway to the track, and they went on from there in the parade past the grandstand, and back, nearly a third of the way round the track, the six furlongs pole.

The third time his saw her was when the weigh-out had been completed, after "Featherstone" had romped in a winner by two lengths. She was fairly bubbling over as she tucked his into her handbag, and waved to him as she pointed to the bag.

All through the spring meeting "Tip" saw her at the race-track, always "on her toes," always an entrancing picture of youth, and the epitomy of al the graces. He began to find himself picturing her in the dust clouds of the track, smiling at him, seeming to be calling to him to get out in front and win. The race-writers spoke of the seemingly inspired riding of the premier jockey. His very acceptance of a mount was reason for a tremendous public play.

Day by day he came to watch for her again there by the grandstand rail.

He made it his business, toward the end of the meeting, to find a chance to speak to her at the track. He'd shifted from his boots and silks to civvies and approached her, hat in hand, before the stand.

"I'm going to miss you a lot after Saturday," he said. Then he blushed, for the first time in so many months that he could not remember, stammered, and then plunged on with what he had to say.

"I don't want you to think I'm trying to flirt. But I'd like to be introduced, or something, and maybe get to be considered as a friend."

She looked at him and then gave a reward of a smile that left him more tongue-tied than ever.

"I know we can be introduced, and then be friends"—a pause, "I'll see what can be done about that just before the Futurity."

"But that's not until the meet at Belmont, in the fall."

"But I'll be here then," she told him, and then turned away to join a party moving up into the stands.

Taught 48 Years Without Using Rod, Teacher's Boast

MISS LAWRENCE TO RETIRE IN JUNE

Never Found Whipping Necessary, Says Veteran of Boston School System

"Not once during the 48 years I have been a teacher in Boston public schools, 41 of these years in the Martin school in Huntington ave., have I given corporal punishment to a child," said Miss Emma E. Lawrence of 68 St. Stephen st., Back Bay, who retires from the service next month at the age of 69 years.

"I have never found it necessary to use the rod on any of the 1700 children whom I have taught. The old fashioned method of keeping them after school to make up their work has been sufficient. I have found parents quite willing to co-operate with me.

LESS DISCIPLINE.

"Children do not require as much discipline as they did in the days when I first taught. They seem to be more interested in their school work now than formerly. This is true of boys as well as girls.

"Boys seem much more natural than formerly. They seem to like school better. I think that is due partly to the fact that school is more interesting, perhaps, than in the old days. We have an acquisition of new subjects that children never had in the old days. I think boys are not a bit bolder, and they are just as happy, if not happier, than in former times.

"As for the girls, I think they are now very much happier with their short dresses and bobbed hair than in the old days, when girls wore much longer dresses and wore long hair, either loosely or in braids. The girls of today seem younger and look younger. I was impressed with this thought as I looked over some pictures of little children in some of my first classes."

MORE PRIVILEGES.

"The child of today has many more privileges than the youngster of 48 years ago. Children have more money to spend. In

RESCUER LOSES TOOTH IN WILD SCUFFLE

Mrs. Florence L. Morton Admits Drinking Before Melee; Tells Court She's Ashamed

A small and attractive woman, who is alleged to have manhandled three men who came to her assistance when she was thrown from a car, was fined $25 in Lynn court this morning.

The fine, the court explained to Mrs. Florence Larocque Morton was imposed to defray the expense of replacing a tooth she is alleged to have knocked from the mouth of Wilfred Vannier.

According to stories told by Vannier, Frederick Spurr and Pelix Walden, they saw Mrs. Morton thrown to the pavement from a car last Friday night and hurried to her assistance.

She responded to their attempt to help her with a shower of blows and kicks, they said, in which Vannier lost a tooth, Spurr's eye was blackened and Walden was thrown into the street.

"I had been drinking and I did not know what I was doing," Mrs. Morton told the court. "I'm terribly ashamed of my self."

CHELSEA KILLER PLEADS GUILTY

Captured yesterday in Portland, Me., William Paananen, 42, today pleaded guilty in Chelsea District Court to the murder on April 13 of Marciano Caggiano, his employer.

Curiosity as to whom the police suspected of the murder led to Paananen's arrest. He walked into a police station in Portland yesterday and inquired whether there was a reward offered for the slayer. He was taken in custody and confessed.

Caggiano, who employed Paananen as a helper on his farm, was found murdered in a shack in Cowell st., Chelsea, his skull split with an axe.

Paananen said in court today that he slew Caggiano because Caggiano had killed 500 of Paananen's countrymen in Finland with a bomb. He will be examined by alienists.

Jennifer Struggles to Hide Sense of Humiliation at Gay Party

By Fannie Hurst

(Copyright, 1931, by Fannie Hurst)

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

AT THE last moment, and to the rushing of innumerable servants, the Edgertons had turned their dinner dance out-of-doors.

The suddenly limpid October, the imminence of moon, the belated perfume of late white honeysuckle, had pressed their way into the ballroom, which was spread with 50 small tables and elaborately laid out across one end with a complete bar, brass rail, polished counter, battalion of bottles and glasses, and the faithful vermuth-stude of a sprinkling of sawdust.

The murky light of one of the pale nights that never become quite dark poured down on to the blue-lit terrace. Tables had been dragged out there. A little platform for musicians was hurriedly set up between one pair of the long, submerging one flight of terrace-stairs. Lanterns were run up in the groves and along the edges of the swimming pool.

Quite Informal

A formal party had suddenly gone violently informal. Tom Edgerton, already convivial, had conceived the idea, along with the evange of party policy, of dragging out a vast iron pot on a crane to boil corn-on-the-cob in the open. The bar was being set up in a pergola.

When the first guests arrived Stella Edgerton, in a bouffant white gown with wired panniers and tumbler in one hand was still in the act of trying to convey to a gardener her idea of how a small red bulb should dangle from the pointed left ear of a marble faun.

It was true that every few moments her rather pretty heart-shaped face twitched as if her composure were a prankish jack-in-the-box. The small red electric bulb refused to dangle from the left ear of the marble faun. She grasped it from the servant, and, leaping to a stone bench, began to adjust it herself.

She was in that position when Jennifer and Berry and a smattering of early guests appeared on the wide marble staircase. At sight of them she swung herself by the neck of the faun legs out in a rigid horizontal and began kissing him against his chilly lips.

It started out as that kind of party.

Out of the Swim

The way Jennifer had long since decided to feel at ease at that she called these closed-corporation functions was to pretend to be as intimately a part of them as everyone else was or pretended to be.

A sense of not belonging; of not knowing the people in its easy informal basis they knew one another, assailed her, and seemed to lock her tonsils and stiffen her heart on those occasions when she was pointed into the social fastnesses of the geyser, if less conservative, elements of them safely interested families.

Their intimate talk that took no much for granted. High handying of Christian names where she was addressed as Miss Patrick. References to past functions to which she had not been bidden, and to future ones to which she would not be bidden.

Not that she was not very much part of these scenes. The Edgertons moved in swift, newspaper headline sets. But even here she was consciously Miss Patrick. The way to keep a stiff upper lip when you were ill at ease and afraid of frightening was to see to it that you were conspicuously Miss Patrick. You pretended, when the two or three side of you at dinner leaned across you to indulge in familiar

VETERAN SALEM POLICE OFFICER SUSPENDED

Salem, May 11—A veteran police official was suspended on a charge of drunkenness and 25 officers were shifted in a departmental shakeup ordered today by City Marshal John H. Buchanan.

The suspended official is Lieut Patrick J. Lehan, for 41 years a member of the police department, and one time city marshal. He was charged with reporting for duty in an intoxicated condition on May 4. He was suspended for three months.

The shakeup followed an investigation of the department by the city marshal in which, he declared, he found many evidences of carelessness and laxity.

DOCTOR SAVES A CHOKING GIRL

Margaret Read, 11, of Tremont st., Roxbury, was in a serious condition at City Hospital today, following an unusual emergency operation which saved her from strangulation.

A victim of diphtheria, the child choked as she was placed on a stretcher to be borne to the contagious ward, and Dr Cecil McDermott opened her throat without an anesthetic and inserted a tube.

Although the hurriedly performed operation saved her from choking to death, the school pupil is in her name being placed on the danger list.

LOREE FIGHTS COMPETITION FROM BUSES

Elimination of bus competition with the railroads within five or six years was predicted today by President L. F. Loree of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, speaking before the legislative committee on transportation at the State House.

The speaker said the busses have become such a nuisance on the highways that the police power will be used to limit their speed, weight and length. When this has been brought about, he said, the busses will cease to be a railroad competitor.

He opposed strongly any allocation of the New England roads to the great trunk lines, saying he believed they should continue under their present management.

If possible, he said, the Pennsylvania should be divested of its interest in the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads. And if this is done, he could see no reason why the New York Central should not be divorced from the Boston & Albany.

Consolidation of the New England roads, he believed, might be helpful.

"It is time," he said, "for New England to put its hand in its own pocket rather than depend upon outside help."

Discussing the competition of automobiles and busses, he said 32 per cent of the Delaware & Hudson passenger business had been lost to these carriers.

CONVICT DYING AFTER SLASHING

Celestino Ardolino, 45, State Prison convict, was dying today at Massachusetts General Hospital while a rigid probe was underway at the prison to learn how Domenic Procopio, his assailant, procured a knife with which he slashed his erstwhile friend.

Procopio was held incommunicado in an isolated cell in the Charlestown jail, end of the prison yard yesterday could be presented the grand jury.

Charges of assault with intent to kill or a murder charge will be placed on whether or not Ardolino survives.

Procopio is serving a 19 to 20-year term for manslaughter.

The stabbing, the cause of which prison officials are at a loss to explain, took place just 10 minutes after the convicts had been dismissed from Mothers' Day services in the chapel.

DEMERIT AUTO LAW FAVORED

Rejection of the plan to substitute a "financial responsibility" automobile law for the present compulsory insurance act will be recommended by the Senate ways and means committee, it was learned today.

The committee will recommend, it as understood, that a demerit system be incorporated into the present law and that a commission be set up similar to the Industrial Accident Board to pass on penalties to be imposed on operators.

The details of the demerit system, worked out by a subcommittee of the main committee, will come up for discussion at an executive meeting of the committee tomorrow.

PAID WIFE $75 A MONTH TO KEEP HOUSE

Brookline Woman, Seeking Divorce, Tells of Agreement With Her Husband

An agreement whereby a wife acted as housekeeper for her husband at $75 a month, featured the hearing today of a divorce action brought by Mrs. Christine L. Remick in Norfolk Probate Court, Dedham.

ADMITS AGGRAVATION

Mrs. Remick told Judge Joseph E. McCook, who took the case under advisement, that she signed on the agreement because she thought it would have been "immoral" to live with her husband after the final separation.

In her testimony, Mrs. Remick said the marriage took place in Quincy, June 2 1906.

She said that on a number of occasions Remick pushed and struck her and seized her by the throat. Late in 1919 she left him, she said, to return the first of January as housekeeper.

SIGNED IT FOR "SMILE"

"In 1927, she testified, she again left Remick, but admitted she had not gone automobile riding with any one. Also that he had called at her home.

Eliot W., Jr., now 20, testified he had seen his father strike his mother and take her by the throat. He admitted his father was highly nervous, but affectionate with his family, and that his mother az greeted his father.

Remick testified he kept the agreement religiously seven years, only to learn later it was illegal. He said he still loves his wife.

ELECTION BILL'S DEFEAT SEEN IN HOUSE

Debate Postponed Until Tomorrow; Washburn Takes a Hand in the Fight

Debate on the pre-primary convention bill, opposition to which is led by Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman, was postponed in the House today until tomorrow.

The postponement was agreed on in order that matters on today's calendar might be cleared up, before the probable extended discussion begins.

The bill, designed to cripple if not destroy the present popular direct primary law, was placed first on tomorrow's calendar.

From a canvass made of the members, it is indicated that the 'bold attempt to use' the Legislature to take from the people their power of nominating directly and without dictation their highest office holders, will be rebuked by a vote of at least four to one.

Lieut.-Gov. William S Youngman who has fought the bill tooth and nail since its inception, charges that the pre-primary convention plan, if put into use, would cost the cities and towns an additional $200,000 for the preliminary convention and engender political campaigning lasting from Christmas to the following November.

The most active of the group pushing the pre-primary convention bill is headed by Chairman Amos L. Tavine of the Republican State Committee. Tavine has been stumping the state in an attempt to win support for the measure.

Washburn Says Youngman Is as Loyal as Liggett

Robert M Washburn, president of the Roosevelt Club, today jumped into the fight between Lieut.-Gov. Youngman and Chairman Amos L. Tavine of the Republican state committee and National Committeeman Louis K. Liggett over the pre-primary convention bill.

Washburn contended that Youngman, in opposing the pre-primary, is as loyal to the Republican platform as Liggett has been to the prohibition planks.

"Mr. Liggett," Washburn stated, "complains that Mr. Youngman has worked on the party plank endorsing the pre-primary bill. Mr. Youngman has stood as close to the platform as Mr. Liggett has stood to its prohibition planks.

"Mr. Liggett forgets that party platforms are written two days so that those who read may run."

BOY IS SUICIDE IN DORCHESTER

With a "shame" note on a table nearby, Reginald Lund, 16-year-old schoolboy, was found asleep today in the living room of his home, 19 Magnolia st, Dorchester.

Beside the body, which lay face down, was a 22-caliber revolver with one chamber empty. He had been shot through the heart.

The note on the table declared by police to have been written by the schoolboy, read:

"I am ashamed of what I have done. I cannot face mother or father or any other person."

It was unsigned.

Young Lund's body was found by Miss Agatha Spicer, 18, of 90 Magnolia st., who was sent to the house when Reginald failed to deliver the house key to his mother at 90 Magnolia st. where she is ill in the home of a married daughter.

Because of the mother's condition, she was not told of the tragedy.

The boy's father, Irving L. Lund, a carpenter, told police he knew of no act by his son that he knew should be ashamed of.

Lund said Reginald took his own life. A family of four children was transferred last January from the John Winthrop School Brighton, to a cooperative school in the district because of his absences from school.

The father said he awakened the boy at 7 a. m. today, as the latter was leaving the house, and told him to deliver the house key to the mother at 90 Magnolia st.

9 RESCUED BY COAST GUARDS

Five coast guard men, a lobster fisherman and three youths were rescued by coast guards during a fierce storm which, accompanied by high winds and lightning, lashed the coast last night and raid today.

Five coast guardsmen aboard patrol boat 153, out of the Gloucester base, were saved by the crew of a Coast Guard destroyer after their craft ran aground off Magnolia late last night. The vessel went aground when the crew became blinded in the fierce rainstorm.

The destroyer put lines aboard the patrol boat and pulled it off into deep water. The vessels hull was considerably damaged.

Augustus Mitchell of 107 East Main st., Gloucester, a coal tar man who had been hauling water pots all day in his small dory a mile off the Magnolia coast, was drifting out to sea when Capt. Hilton Atkins of the Dolliver's Neck station kept him from being taken by the power boat.

On their way out the crew picked up three youths in a small dory. The trio had no oars and were in imminent danger from the gale.

FLOATING ZOO ARRIVES HERE

Carrying the largest consignment of wild animals which ever entered the port of Boston, the British steamer City of Christiana docked today at Commonwealth pier from Calcutta, Colombo and Port Said.

Included in the cargo of zoological specimens were 1000 monkeys, 140 pythons, a king cobra and an assortment of other poisonous snakes, and a Bengal tiger.

The heavy weather encountered on the voyage took a heavy toll of the animals. In the heavy seas a wooden box containing an 18-foot python was smashed, and the huge snake was at large for hours until recaptured by S. S. Khan, Hindu attendant of the floating menagerie.

'ROD SPARED' IN SCHOOL CAREER

the old days a child would consider it a treat to get a penny to buy candy. A penny today would be an insult to a child. A fifteent bag of candy is the smallest amount a child of today would want to buy."

In reminiscing about her early teaching days, Miss Lawrence said:

"When I first came here to teach there was nothing near the Martin school but fields and woods. During the noon recess we picked wild violets and apple blossoms where the Harvard Medical School now stands in Longwood ave.

"Horse cars ran by the school once in 15 minutes along Huntington ave., and it was quite exciting if we missed a car. They never dreamed it would be as noisy as it is now from electric cars passing every minute or they wouldn't have built the school here.

"This school was named after Gen. Augustus Martin, who was mayor of Boston when it was dedicated 64 years ago. This school was his pride. He donated a library valued at $500, and some of the books are still in use here.

"One of the outstanding events in my memory was the visit of Gen. Phil Sheridan, the eminent American soldier, about a year or two after the school opened. Gen. Martin around the visit. Gen. Sheridan spoke to the pupils on patriotism. He was not so much a speaker as he was a soldier. He was a fine appearing man, a rosy, genial sort of a man. I recall that he told us he thought we were 'a fine bunch of people.'"

WILL VISIT EUROPE

She declared much happiness comes to a teacher from receiving good reports in after life of pupils she has taught.

"I have just received a card from Eugene Glover, a former pupil, now at Cornell University, which pleased me," she said. "He is the type of boy a teacher likes to remember. He went into Harvard Medical School with all A's in his examinations and is now doing special work at Louvain, Belgium.

"I recently received a letter from a woman in Clarksburg, West Virginia, who was a pupil of mine 30 years ago. She wrote that she is to visit Boston this month and will bring her daughter along for me to see her. That's one of the pleasant things about teaching."

Miss Lawrence plans to visit England and the continent this summer.

A testimonial dinner will be given to Miss Lawrence at the Martin school tonight by former pupils. It is expected 600 will attend. Among her former pupils who plan to attend are Mayor O'Neill of Everett and Budget Commissioner Fox of Boston.

3 SEE NATIVE U. S. FIRST TIME

Three young Americans saw their country for the first time today when the Cunarder Scythia docked at East Boston.

They are Matthew, 4½, Paul, 3, and Josephine, 10 months, children of Dr. and Mrs. M. D. Miles, who spent five years in India.

The parents are members of the American Baptist Missionary Society, back in America on furlough of a year.

Another passenger insured the presence of a lion in the "Daniels' Den" in Brookline after today.

It is not a real, live, snarling lion, but a quiet, docile stuffed one, carried in the arms of its mistress Miss Margaret Daniels of Brookline. Miss Daniels was one of more than 100 passengers who concluded a trip from England and Ireland when the ship docked.

She said she bought the realistic novelty in England to take its place in a specially-fitted room in her home called "Daniels' Den." Her return trip ended a three months' visit abroad.

Among the arrivals from foreign lands was Miss Katoleen Carnegie of London, who arrived for a three months' visit with Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody, headmaster of Groton School at Groton.

STATE ENGINEER DENIES CHARGE OF CRUELTY

Witness Declares Bride Left Him for Four Months After Wedding

How he called on his wife and asked for a kiss, only to be refused, a couple of days after their honeymoon ended, was related on the witness stand in Middlesex Probate Court today by Francis L. Sellew, State engineer.

Sellew said his bride had refused to go to their Natick home when they honeymoon ended and had gone to her parents' home in Canton instead, joining him only after four months had passed.

DENIES CRUELTY CHARGE

He denied the charges of cruelty made by his wife, Esther, who is suing for separate support. Last week Mrs. Sellew testified her husband grew angry at her for "snuggling close to him" as their honeymoon began.

"The day after she left me, at the end of our honeymoon, I went over to Canton to kiss my wife," testified Sellew.

"She cried, 'Keep him away from me, don't touch me.' I asked her what the trouble was and she said she was terribly nervous. She refused to come home with me. She said her father was ill.

"After that I took her with me on several business trips to Cape Cod, and each time, when we got back, I asked her to come home with me, but she refused. I was not cruel to her on those trips or at any other time."

Sellew said he was married first in April, 1912, and his wife died in 1926. He said his housekeeper was Mrs. Elsenor Mortensen, and trouble arose between the housekeeper and the second Mrs. Sellew, after the latter finally joined him at Natick.

ROW OVER HOUSEKEEPER

"She grew hysterical over a remark of Mrs. Mortensen's daughter, which was on the piano, and had to be taken to the Norwood hospital where she remained a month," he testified.

"The doctor advised me to get a separation.

"Dr. Myerson, an alienist, who also examined her, said she had made some peculiar statements. I denied their truth and he said 'My dear sir, they are statements of a sick mind, and we know they're not true.' He advised an annulment or separation."

Sellew denied ever going to the housekeeper's room in the night. Mrs. Sellew had testified to seeing her husband go to the housekeeper's bedroom door, although he did not enter. It was this accusing to the wife, which precipitated the quarrel.

He robbed Earl Benjamin of a watch and $87.50 in Everett, Feb. 28, robbed Arnold Durant of $6.20, a revolver and a pocketbook in Malden May 4 and robbed Charles Murphy of $200 in Medford.

"This man was recently sentenced in Suffolk County to 13 years in the Concord reformatory," said Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank G. Volpe, "In view of his widespread activities, I believe he is no fit subject for the reformatory and ask a state prison sentence."

Twelve wide-eyed girls, students in a Chestnut st., Back Bay, private school, occupied a jury box in federal court today and intently watched proceedings as Judge James A. Morton instructed 200 men and women in citizenship.

Chaperoned by Mrs. Louise Johnson, the girl listened with close attention as Judge Morton outlined the fundamental laws of the land and then impressed upon the citizenship-seekers their obligation under protection of the Stars and Stripes.

The students were keenly interested in the subsequent swearing in of the men and women as citizens and their taking of the oath of allegiance.

FIVE AND TEN

By FANNIE HURST

discussion of an important social function to which you had mysteriously and damnably not been bidden, with a smile as bright as platinum drawn across your face.

You let them make up a party around you to go off cruising in warm waters on the yacht of the father of a boy who had just kissed the back of your neck, and laughed at some rally about the Delaware Gap and the Delaware Yawn, as if you were not stinging at the omission.

Loud Laughter

The lively Miss Rarick was loud in her laughter. That was part of the stiff upper lip. She was daring in her dress, but impeccably so, never erring beyond the bonds of chic. A good fellow up to a point, and that point, as she was fond of putting it, an exclamation point!

Perhaps he had never realized she was not sporting. He had, though! He had. He had. He had jumped like sprung trap when she had come out with it. Perhaps he had thought her a little spiffilicated. God make him think I was tight! No, no, no, he wouldn't. They had not even stopped for cocktails before they drove off. Then came that hateful Irene Annesey! How did one address her? Hello, Irene? Or hail Miss Annesey?

Miss Annesey solved it. "Hello, Berry! Haven't seen you since three a. m. Good party at the Ruhls' wasn't it? Hello, Roger! Say, you're driving with us over to Edgecombe from here for a sunrise cocktail. Howdo, Miss Rarick!"

Damn them! Damn life! "Berry darling, that's my ankle you're climbing."

With the exception of a centerable which seated twelve, the flocks of surrounding smaller ones were for six. Berry and Jennifer were at one which adjoined the larger one, presided over by Leslie.

A Maneuver

Berry's absence from that centerable was one of those elaborately casual maneuvers which usually fall of their purpose and become merely elaborate maneuvers.

"Berry's been banished," said a Miss Sieben der Venter, who was narrow and caustic and something of a town legend because she continued to refuse to sell or build on fifty fabulously valuable feet of vacant lot on Fifth Ave., but maintained it as a playground for her three black poodles. "I scent a diplomatic move!"

"I'm making him eat at second table, Van Steen; his manners are too atrocious for first," cried Leslie, whom Berry had once accused of overhearing, no matter how large the crowd, any reference to him.

Almost immediately, the occasion began to progress. The amusing feature of the bar kept a steady stream of young men skating across blue tiles, imperiling waiters, and returning with assorted tumblers of assorted drinks, which they balanced precariously, to the anguish of women in decollete who feared for their shoulders.

Torn Away

A Miss Flavverdale, impoverished, but one of the right Flavverdales, the one, by the way, who had managed things for the St. Louis Sieurns, began by insisting upon carting Berry off before the fowl course, with a napkin filled with dinner rolls to be crumpled into the goldfish-pond.

"I want to stay with my fiddle-mouse," bawled Berry, and began to stroke Jennifer's ermine and pull at the fringe of soft black tails which bordered it.

"Don't be an idiot, Berry," said the efficient Miss Flavverdale; "I'll buy you a five-and ten-cent one."

"Was that a dirty dig?" said Jennifer in a beautiful boy beside her whom she did not know, but who was in the first throes of getting drunk on champagne which he kept sipping, while he refused all food.

"A dirty dig" he repeated, rolling his extraordinary blue and luminous eyes. "A dirty dig! Apparently the octave of his conversation, at least at this stage consisted in rereading the last three words of what was said to him.

"The Beautiful next to you, Miss Rarick," sang out Leslie Edgerton, on a sudden surge of geniality, when she saw Berry hauled protesting along the Mediterranean of blue tiles. "To Jules Wilke-Barre. He's going to cut a tooth for us later in the evening."

A Wilke-Barre. A thrill shot through Jennifer. Despise herself for the snobbery of it as she would, it was impossible not to bristle with awareness among names that were whole planetary systems in the social firmament. This naughty-eyed, beautiful-eyed boy, whose knee had to be shoved away again and again as it approached hers, a Wilke-Barre. Here, gathered at these 50 tables were the youngsters of the mighty ones of the land, Madison, Rhodes, Flavverdale, Wilke-Barre.

BUYING

The Kendall Company of Boston, a manufacturer of surgical textiles and allied products, operating nine plants in six states. Its executive management emphasizes the importance of buying right as well as of selling right. It recently saved $6000 on a $42,000 order at a recent telephone price by telephone.

THE Kendall Company's operating activities are at Walpole, Mass., at Slatersville, R. I., at its Bauer & Black plant in Chicago and at five textile mills in the South.

Kendall executives use the telephone freely, one of the principal uses being in connection with centralized purchasing of materials. They say, "Good purchasing includes showing producers how to effect economies and thus reduce prices. This can be done only by frequent interchange of ideas. We find the telephone indispensable in our purchasing department."

• • • • •

THE cost of toll service has been cut, while the quality of it—its speed of connection and clearness of transmission—has been raised. Its value to business is governed, not by the cost, but by the proved results of its intelligent use.

The technique of buying or selling is a modern science. Telephone service brings buyer and seller together—almost face to face—quickly, effectively, and at low cost. Combine technique and telephone and you get results.

A Thrilling Serial of Post-War Love, Romance and Intrigue

By FAITH BALDWIN

Lorrimer Happy at Dance

By FAITH BALDWIN

MARY LOU looked lovely. Had whatever, perhaps, looked lovelier. But a close observer might have seen the faint shadows beneath the brave blue eyes, the wistful drooping of the red mouth.

She touched the slim stopper of a perfume bottle to ears and hair, forced her lips into a smile, as Lorrimer whistled outside her door, caught up her wrap of peach velvet collared in white fox and the evening bag of seed-pearl which had been Jenny's Christmas present to her, and went out of the room.

"If it weren't so idiotic," she thought to herself, "I'd say I felt like a ship, drifting, going on the rocks, sinking—well, I'll go down with colors flying!" thought Mary Lou.

"Gosh!" exclaimed Lorrimer, like a youngster, when he saw her. "You're a public menace. Delight! I ought to lock you up in a glass case where no one could see you but myself!" He laughed as he said it, but his eyes were serious, a little jealous, even.

Mary Lou laughed back.

"I'd hate that," she told him, "no setting up exercises, no fresh air, no galloping over a good road and sailing over a fence. Yes, I'd dislike it very much, Lorry. I'd feel like a gold fish with all its proverbial privacy made immortal by Mr. Cobb."

Lorrimer looked very well himself, his broad shoulders held well back, his face, which had filled out these last months eager lighted with interest, the fine tawny hair slicked smooth and healthy with good color. His brown eyes smiled down into hers as they went to the waiting car together and his voice was vibrant with the renewed joy of living.

"Warm enough?" he asked doubtfully. "I'll phone the garage and have Simmons bring up the town car if you're not."

"I'm all right." She shrugged herself deeper into the white fur collar of her coat. Better to drive in Lorrimer's roadster with him at the wheel, than to have Simmons, the second man, drive them in the town car, in which she would have to sit close to Lorrimer in the intimate darkness. Far better, she thought, unhappily.

She got in the car, Lorrimer's hands were steady on the wheel, they went down the drive and out to the gate and turned into the road which would lead them to the Wyneses'.

"Too bad mother missed the party," Lorrimer was saying, "but she was set on seeing this fool show and so was Dog Lan. She told me she hadn't been to a first night for so long she'd almost forgotten how exciting it was . . . I've been a selfish beast," he added remorsefully.

"Your mother looked beautiful," Mary Lou said, remembering. Margaret Lorrimer in her soft, draped coral velvet frock, the white hair, silver shining, in thos waves about her delicate face, her eyes bright with her secret anticipation.

"Yes. And you—you're wonderful tonight," he said quietly. "I'm a darned lucky fellow," he went on, "far beyond my merits.

"To have you—for I have you, Delight; after all, you can't get away from me, a bride's you can't escape me . . . I'll put up a fight if you try," he said, half laughing, half very grave.

"Do you—want to go?" he asked her suddenly.

"Oh, please, Lorry—!"

"I've been pretty patient," he reminded her.

"I know." She touched his sleeve. A fleeting touch, and one that she couldn't help. She had to. Had to feel him near, just for a moment. "I mustn't!" she thought despairingly. "If I couldn't before—how much more important it is now that I—"

She broke off, in her thoughts, threw away her hand. Sat back in her seat and closed her eyes. It was all so hard—too hard.

Jenny's great house was gay with lights, gay with laughter, with young people, voices with the crooning orchestra which had come out from town to celebrate in a price—with Jenny. Jenny herself was adorable, a golden girl, in a straight little frock, all gold, and her amber hair in distracting confusion. Larry, who confessed in a stage whisper to Lorrimer, that he'd been mixed with an inferiority complex, was, nevertheless, completely the life of the party. They was dancing and silly games and a gorgeous buffet supper with the elder Wyneses wandering through the colorful maze of lights, flowers and people in between—and very good-looking denizens of Olympus.

"They got off all right?"

"Yes. They're in town. Took Rodgers and the big car."

"Lorrimer didn't suspect anything?" he probed.

"No—"

"I wonder?" mused Larry. "what shall we? Mrs. Lorrimer, I mean."

"I don't know," said Mary Lou. Her feet were light on the polished floor, but her heart was lead in her breast.

Brush Up for Hair Beauty

By MISS HUDDLESTON

ARE YOU making the most of your hair? Do you brush it each night, shampoo it each week, massage the scalp and exercise the hair when necessary? You may think all this unnecessary because your hair appears to be in excellent condition, but let me tell you about the tale of woe I heard over the bridge table the other afternoon.

Josephine Huddleston

One of the young ladies remarked that her once lovely tresses had suddenly gone awry. The sheen was gone from her hair. It was stringy and simply wouldn't dress. It just went dull and lifeless almost overnight.

She had never done anything to keep her hair lovely because she said it required none of the beautifying treatments other women found it advisable to take.

One morning she was arranging her hair when she noticed a slight trace of dandruff. Closer inspection revealed quite a little of the beauty destroying dandruff and also that her hair had lost a great deal of its gloss and flexibility. The remedy is simple but it must be followed consistently. And, for those of you who take the same attitude about your hair, let me again remind you that the basic principles of hair care must be observed or, sooner or later you'll find yourself in the same predicament as the girl at the bridge party.

I know that any number of girls could make their hair truly beautiful if the brush were used less sparingly and if the scalp were massaged every second or third day.

There is one vitally important factor to remember about brushing the hair and that is that the brush must have not only long flexible bristles but it must be kept immaculately clean. Immaculately clean means that the brush must be cleansed each time it is used

What's in Fashion Today

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, May 11—"Lucky is the bride the sun shines on." Particularly lucky if it happens to be the June 1931 sun. Because the June 1931 wedding dress is just about the loviest the wedding world has ever been.

The June bride has several choices of material for her dress. If she's conservative and tradition-loving, she'll choose satin, in a mellow, rich ivory tone.

If she prefers something more easily transformed into a smart Summer evening dress, then she can be fashionable in lace or a heavy sheer crepe like crepe roma. And she'll choose the last named if she wants to be ultra new and modern.

Modern Silhouette

But whatever her fabric choice, the design of her dress is sure to be as modern as today. The picturesque bride is for anyone age sheath or Civil War hoops isn't in the 1931 picture. The gown that the bride wears at the altar is as definitely this time as any of the dresses in her trousseau.

If she's anything at all except 1931, she's quite apt to be Grecian. Because the smart modern silhouette is an adaptation of the Grecian draperings.

That means the fashionable June bridal gown is fitted smoothly through the hipline and flares out in graceful folds at the bottom. The bodice is plain, with a pain or softly draped neckline.

Train Part of Dress

The train is cut in one piece with the dress and is as long or as short as looks best on her.

If sleeve are short, the bride wears long gloves. If sleeves are long, as in the illustration, gloves are short.

Simple Veils

Veils are as simple this year as they ever have been. Just close-fitting little Juliet caps, worn so that short hair shows, with some of the hair showing.

Many brides prefer to cling to tradition in their bouquet—and that means lilies-of-the-valley. But for something different—calla lilies in white orchids or gardenias combined with orchids are smart. And simple white sweet peas are the newest idea.

For the Bridesmaid

The bridesmaid who attends the June bride has her share of fashion triumphs, too. Bridesmaids' dresses are just as lovely as brides'.

They follow much the same silhouette, with fitted hipline and low fullness. And while fullness may be long or graceful, ruffles, tiers and flounces.

Large floppy hats top off the costume. Or if a jacket is worn a smaller hat. And the new Watteau, flower-trimmed as shown in the sketch, is especially smart.

(Copyright, 1931, by Amos Parrish)

Notes of Latest Fashions

THE IDEA is this. You start off with your one suit of jacket and skirt. Then you get one contrasting skirt, such as a check. Navy and white if your suit is navy. Brown and white if your suit is brown. Or even an all-white skirt, since white is such an important fashion note.

Newer necklines show low V shapes and deep squares—so low and deep that they have to be filled in with some kind of trimming.

Combinations of three colors appear in everything this spring. New chiffon necklines are made of three strands in three colors such as red, black and white, or blue, yellow and pale green.

Or they may be three tones of one color. And many of them have threads to match.

Once women wore what was jokingly called the "peek-a-boo" shirtwaist. Now they're wearing the peek-a-boo in evening dresses.

There are deep decolletages with a strip across the back at the top; and backs that look to be fully covered at first glance but reveal a big slit down the center or the sides.

Some dresses are pin-tucked all over. So are blouses. And you even see it on skirts and on jackets.

Rays of Sun Help in Sinus Treatment

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

SINUS DISEASE is one of the most prevalent and common of body disorders. Though no actual figures have been compiled, in fact I know, its prevalence at times is appalling.

At least one person in every family seems to be the victim of this complaint. What can the reason be and how can we prevent this annoyance?

Dr. Copeland

Sinus disease is usually the result of neglected head colds. It often follows sore throat, ear disease, grippe, bronchitis, pneumonia or any infection of the upper air passages.

There are four pairs of cavities or sinuses found in the head. All these are accessory air passages and open into the nose. They are the frontal, the sthmoidal, the sphenoidal and the antrum, the last also called the maxillary sinus.

If one of these chambers become blocked, either by mucus or by other debris, it soon becomes infected. Then we have "sinusitis," inflammation of the sinus.

As a rule, there is severe headache and constant nasal discharge. Though the condition is not a fatal one, it is bad enough, to make one's life miserable and unhappy. In addition, it lowers the vitality of the body, making it more susceptible to general infections and disease.

Sinus disease may follow infection of the root of a tooth. This is important in considering the prevention of the condition. The teeth should never be overlooked as possible causative factors.

Surgery may be indicated in some of these cases, but it should not be resorted to too quickly. Medical care and supervision are usually quite enough. The chronic cases are more difficult to overcome.

If you are a sufferer from sinus disease, consult your physician. Have a careful examination made of all your teeth and sinuses. It is best to have X-ray pictures taken.

Plenty of nourishing food, fresh air and sunshine are imperative. Taking in the sun is one of the finest methods of treatment for sinus disorders. If possible, live for a time in a warm climate, above sea level and away from large bodies of water.

Answers to Health Queries

J. W. Q.—I am troubled with lumbago and have been advised by a friend to eliminate tomatoes and prunes; what value do they have? Heat usually gives relief, but I would like a definite cure.

A.—Prunes comes under the heading of the acid fruits. Most fruits, however, become alkaline in their final reaction in the body. Each system is different and should be studied and treated accordingly. Try to find the underlying cause of the trouble first of all.

A. M. B. Q.—Is it possible to rebuild the glandular system and how can this be done?

A.—This condition can be overcome in some instances by supplying the deficient gland. The treatment should be prescribed and taken under proper medical supervision and advice.

A.—Trench mouth, or Vincent's Angina, is an infection and must have proper and careful attention and treatment in every instance. See your dentist and follow his advice and judgment. It is highly infectious and care should be taken to avoid spreading or carrying it to others.

He Breaks His Word, She Says

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The boy I love has disappointed me three times during my seven months of friendship with him. He has shown me in many ways that he loves me and continually speaks of marriage. Still, he makes a promise only to break it the next day. He is most sincere in every other way but that. Each time he disappointed me he gave me some plausible excuse. Would you advise me to act indifferently, as though it doesn't make any difference whether he keeps his promises or not, or should I show resentment? GRETA

Dear Greta: When a young man is prompt with alibis before marriage usually he speeds them up much more quickly afterwards. Better make haste slowly with that type of cavalier.

At the same time, please let me say that some girls demand so much in the way of attention from boys that the latter can hardly be blamed for letting down on engagements sometimes. Do you expect this young man to see you every evening? Do you call him often on the phone? Do you expect him to explain where he's been and with whom he has talked when he's away from you? If so, he has my sympathy. But if you haven't done these things, and he's just a date-breaker, I wouldn't take him too seriously.

Their Father Returns

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When we were 6, 7 and 10 years of age our father deserted our mother, going off with another woman. Our mother was one in a million, she got a job and used to sit up half the night washing and ironing our clothes, sewing and mending that we might make a good appearance at school. We never felt we were objects of pity. She was cheerful, never openly sorry for herself, but always made our friends welcome. Father's name was never spoken either in praise or blame, and once when one of us asked her about him, she said: "Don't speak of that, a closed book." We married, and when we could have made her life more comfortable for her, she died, utterly worn out by the struggle she carried on so gallantly. And now father has written that he is old and poor and would love to come back to his "dear little girls whom he has never forgotten." I laughed at that, the "little girls" might have died of want for all he cared. One sister feels she should take him in and has asked us to contribute. I do not feel under any obligation to do so, and it would necessitate many sacrifices and scenes at home. What do you think of such a case? TWO SISTERS.

Dear Sisters: It is purely a question of choice and not one of obligation, what you do or don't do for such a father. It's doubtful whether he would fit into the home of a daughter whom he had deserted as a child, but the problem is up to the sister who forsahe want him under her roof. To make sacrifices for such a parent seems unjustified for. If you wish to contribute to his support, it would be kind and forgiving.

Hints From the Beauty Box

WOMEN are quick and keen to note beauty defects that are reflected in the mirror, but of the beauty of the voice they are unaware. An unpleasant speaking voice may be due to straightness of the nose, obstruction in the upper air passages or enlargem nt of the tonsils thereon the most common cause is high, shrill register or excess volume.

An understanding of right tional value will help regulate the metallic voice. Children should be taught to enunciate clearly, but to keep the voice moderate. Too much shouting goes on for the well being of human nerves.

A RED HAT reflects its glowing color on the face; when it is much, factory blushes should be well pedaled. If rouge is dark no heavy it takes on a purple tone when a blue powder would be more suitable. Rouge makes rouge of any color look patchy, rachelle or henna powder is better. While haired ladies find mauve powder flattering.

New Ideals in Modern Mergers

By WINIFRED BLACK.

CONSOLIDATED - merged — amalgamated - combined—dear me, we'll have to learn a brand new vocabulary if this thing keeps on.

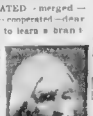
The little grocer around the corner is going out of business next week.

He went to work when he was 14 years old, he delivered butter and eggs and rice, and new potatoes, and he got to know all about the kitchen of his various customers.



Winifred Black

He knew a lot about big cus tomers that weren't his.

He knew which housekeeper wore a neat little overall when she did her house work and which one stopped around in a kimono and bedroom slippers.

He knew who paid their bills on time and who was always a little short.

He knew the ones who checked over the things he delivered and made him take back the potatoes that were beginning to spoil and the eggs that were not as fresh as they might be.

He was something more than a mere delivery boy. He was a human being with a life of his own, friends of his own, likes and dislikes, with a chance to climb up the ladder on his own feet or stay at the bottom.

And he climbed—not very fast at first, but he did climb. He got to be head clerk in a prosperous little grocery, and he saved his money. And when he married the grocer's daughter he bought out the grocery. Fixtures, good will and all.

And he and his wife live up over the grocery in a comfortable little flat and they were just beginning to think of buying a site in the suburbs and building a neat little cottage of their own for—of course you and me know how to look at it—if they might need a cottage before very long.

He's merged or consolidated or something into a big chain store affair.

And now he is just a clerk again, with somebody telling him what to do and standing over him to see that he does it.

The little grocer is pretty blue about it for I, the truth must be told he was thinking of starting a little shop of his own. And now he's beginning all over again as a clerk.

Everybody is amalgamated and co-operated. It's all very interesting, isn't it?

But somehow I keep thinking of a certain efficient, up and coming Hilda Petterson I used to know.

Hilda Petterson could cook and bake and sweep and wash and iron. She always began to rattle things in the kitchen right after daylight so everyone would wake up and get to breakfast in time, as Hilda could get her work "out of the way," as she phrased it.

Once I asked Hilda if she didn't think it would be a good plan to have breakfast, lunch and dinner all together about the middle of the day and get it over with.

She said yes she thought so.

She was the first practical amalgamated and merged and consolidated that I ever knew.

Handling Fork and Spoon

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

2—Should a private chauffeur be thanked for taking a person home?

3—Should a father be congratulated when a daughter marries?

PATSY.

1. To [illegible] and
2. Yes.
3. Yes.
4. When a fork [illegible] of the right [illegible] served in good deal of [illegible] a spoon [illegible] but [illegible] use a spoon.

Send the Wedding Gift

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Is it proper for a hostess to present a bride-to-be with a gift at her announcement party? Should this be done immediately after the announcement has been made? The gift is meant for a wedding gift. MRS. G. C

Since this gift is to be a wedding gift, it should be sent to the home of the bride-to-be, not given at a party of this kind.

Consider Those Who Are So Vitally Concerned

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

1—Is it proper for a young couple to announce their engagement formally at an evening bridge party at the young lady's home without notifying the parents or relatives of either?

2—Is there a good book on engagements and weddings? If so, please tell me how to obtain a copy.

1—This plan would seem to me to take great pains to be socially unattractive. This event is such an important one to those whom such a plan would omit, that I should think that the parents and close relatives would feel deeply hurt and justifiably so. Why not plan this occasion with special care for those whom it most closely concerns?

2—I have quite a few pamphlets on weddings . . . the formation of the occasional, the recessional, the appropriate clothes, the presents usually given to the attendants by the bride and groom, and so forth. I shall be very happy to send you this group of pamphlets, if you will send me an addressed envelope.

CHAIN STORES ARE MARKET LEADERS

By FRANK H. MELOON

Chain stores have been repeatedly featured as upside leaders in the stock market sessions. The group has been particularly in the limelight during the past week with new highs set by Woolworth and Grant and a buying movement in other issues.

Changes in commodity prices have drawn the spotlight about the past week and have been a factor of considerable importance in the stock market. Comparisons are widely drawn between the present sales of merchandise and those of a year ago. Many believe increases or decreases in the volume of sales are of outstanding importance as indicating business trends for the near future.

Steel Operations Prove Small Factor

A study with allotments and declines today moved over a comparatively narrow range. Steel operations proved only a small market factor for the present. A slight pick-up down a unfilled tonnage of the Steel Corporation suggested a further slackening of mill operations. Wall st was generally of the opinion that the sport of the rate would not decline under 60 per cent of capacity, against 47 per cent as the current rate.

Film Shares Are "Mystery Stocks"

The film issues are the most mysterious stocks of today. Trading on this group is made impossible by inside information not known to the public. Today Paramount jumped new specials on a large volume of trading. Loew's moved downward with the list.

Western Union Off 40 on Move

Western Union today fell through to a new low completing a drop of 40 points since 1930 top. Lowered income is responsible. The big communications company earned $5.67 a share in 1930. Profit, from its current position and general business improvement of good proportions.

Dividend Doubts Affecting Case

Dividend doubts are affecting J. I. Case. The stock today eased to 100, completing a downward plunge of 14 points from last week's high.

Rails Fall Off After Rate Move

Carriers have shown receding interest since announcement of the Chicago move to advance freight rates. The move has alarmed some holders, doubtful of its effectiveness even if carried through. Total Atchison, Pennsylvania, New York Central, New Haven, Erie and other active carriers fell 1 point.

List of Favored Shares Is Given

One big New York and Boston brokerage house says today:

"Although we think there is no great hurry to buy, we do believe that advantage should be taken of reactions to accumulate issues such as General Motors, United Corp. and affiliates in that group. We also continue to favor American Tobacco, Woolworth, General Electric, Borden, National Biscuit and Standard Brands."

Mellons Largest in United Light

Taking up of latest option by the Mellon interests for additional shares on United Light & Power "A" calls attention to the fact that the three largest holdings in this company are the Mellons, Continental Shares of American Light & Power and Middle West Gas hudge of new Baltimore is very close to actual gross expenditure for 1930 and is one of the largest in the history of the company. The total appropriation, about $78,000,000 will be completed this year.

These figures call attention to the great size of the company. Among the utilities it is only exceeded in magnitude by American Telegraph & Telephone.

Coca-Cola's Earnings Good

Total quarterly earnings of Coca-Cola showing made public within about 10 days and the Street is looking for slightly more than $2 a share. Statisticians have been calling attention to the large margin of profit indicated by the records of the past. Last year shares totaled 27,798,730 gallons and returned in the total of $41,284,811, which indicates a selling price of $1.48 a gallon. Of this total, $12,515,351 was saved for net on that the profit is figured at about 45 cents a gallon. Most of the buying which has come into the stock at times during reactions in the past few weeks has been credited to insiders who should be well informed on the company's affairs.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Financial and industrial news over the week-end was little changed from that of the week. The general sets of one per cent posted today for call money broke a 22-year record, the last time this rate was named for renewal having been in 1908.

As in the final sessions of last week, the market today lacked buying demand from outside sources and faced a comparatively small volume of liquidation.

In the second N. E. P. G. C. Amateur-pro tournament of the season, played today at the Wollaston Golf Club, Donald Vinton, Plymouth, and C. Searles Reed, Bristol County, tied with Dick May and Brad Oxnard, Metacomet, to lead the field at the end of the morning round with a 72.

Not only did Vinton-Reed have the low gross by a margin of four strokes, but their net of 70 was two strokes lower than their nearest competitor with two-thirds of the field in.

Despite the cold and threatening weather, 37 teams were in action and the scores were all running high.

Walter Cosgrove and Jim Dolan from Green Hill had a better ball of 76, while Roy Brondson and Jim Fitzgerald, Oyster Harbor; Ed Lally and J. W. McLaine, Amesbury; Dave Harkney, Vesper, and E. J. Young, Sandy Burr; Dick Lincoln, Hatherly, and Wm Trowbridge, South Shore, and Martin Higgins and J. H. Mullins, Fall River, were tied for fourth place with 77s.

DIAMOND DUST

By JOE CASHMAN

Believe it or not, if "Hod" Lisenbee can beat "Wes" Ferrell in the fourth and final Red Sox-Indians game in Cleveland this afternoon, Bob Quinn's hired men will make a clean sweep of their first series in the West.

The third straight win over Peck's charges, which they hung up yesterday, put the Sox in a sixth-place tie with the Chicago White Sox and leaves them only three games behind the league-leading New York Yankees, which is one-half game nearer the roof than are the third-place Braves in the National League.

That gallant fighting spirit which Manager John "Shano" Collins has instilled in his boys and which promises to carry them to unexpected heights this season, saved them in the Sabbath contest.

According to reports from Cleveland, the game should never have been played. It rained hard for several hours previous to starting time and the contest was delayed 45 minutes in opening. The Indians insisted upon playing because they had lost the first two games and felt sure of getting an even break in the engagement, providing they could get the last two tilts in.

At the end of the first inning it looked as though they had had the right dope, for they straightened out Bull Durham's slants for four hits and as many runs during their initial session at bat.

What is a four-run handicap in the lives of the Red Sox? Less than nothing.

In the third the Fenway flock tied the count and knocked Mel Harder, Cleveland starting pitcher, out of the box, and in the sixth, with Rothrock on base, Earl W. hit his second home run in two games and then our athletes had another game in the bag.

They added another run to their total in the eighth and two more in the ninth, but these weren't needed, as after the first, Durham was invincible.

We don't know how Collins does it, but he certainly knows when and when not to shift players. He took Danny MacFayden out of the first game after the twirler had allowed two runs in the first inning and finished up with Wiley Moore, who won with ease. He let Durham stay in despite the four-run bombardment in the opening stanza yesterday and the kid came through with flying colors. Just a great manager is the only explanation.

Yesterday's postponement was the first the Braves have suffered at home this season and it was a costly one. At least 25,000 would have flocked to the Wigwam to watch the double-header with the Reds had the weather been favorable.

'Le Gros Bebe Ruth' Is Idol of French 'Pure' Ringmen

Chicago, May 11 (AP)—Baseball and Babe Ruth were sources of pleasure for the French amateur boxers who will meet New York and Chicago punchers tomorrow night.

Gaby Leral, plumber and featherweight champion of France, thinks Frenchmen should play baseball and "make beaucoup des francs, like la gros Bebe Ruth." The Babe, incidentally, is about the only baseball player whose fame has spread to France, and for the reason that he makes more money than the President of the United States, for working about two hours a day, five months of the year.

The French youths saw their first game at Comiskey Park Saturday, and quickly fashioned their own terms for the players. The pitcher is the "lancer," the catcher is the "receveur," while the basemen are "defenders of the first corner," etc. That batter is the "wielder of the baton," while a fly ball is a "balle haute" and a grounder a "balle basse."

Gaby, who has been training for the bouts here, will meet Jack Delaney, Canadian lightweight champion, in the main bout.

Pat Creedon Plays for Allentown Nine

Callahan's injury has caused him to lose several important bouts on the West Coast.

...ago Cubs out-... the home run department personnel, announced today by Manager Rogers Hornsby.

Hornsby, in giving out the news concerning the benching of Wilson, said:

"Hack has not been hitting this spring, and maybe a rest will do him good. (Hack is hitting .271.) His fielding has fallen off with his batting, and we need somebody who can go and get 'em."

Because of the injury to Hornsby's leg, he will work Bill Burgess at second base, his position, against left-handed pitchers, while Clarence Blair will play the keystone sack when right handers are performing.

When Blair isn't busy at second, he will be playing first in place of Charley Grimm, who is batting only .217.

Wilson Surprised; but Says "I'm in Slump"

Wilson was surprised this morning when informed that Manager Hornsby intended to bench him. He said Hornsby had not told him of the move—as yet.

"I'm in a slump. I can't get going," said Wilson. "I ought to be hitting 100 points more than I am. I've been hitting the ball hard enough, but I line 'em at some fielder. It isn't a question of the new ball—soiled baseballs or the raised stitches which give the pitcher a better grip—it's just that I can't get going. Maybe a layoff will do me good."

Speaking further of Wilson, who last year surprised the sport world by busing out Babe Ruth for home-slitting honors, Manager Hornsby said:

"After Hack has a few days rest he probably will come back swinging free and easy and be his own self. He got off to a bad start and has been pressing too hard. All our heavy hitters of last year have been taking too many third strikes to outguess the pitchers."

Karl Grace will replace Hartnett, whose hard hitting the first part of the season caused fans to pick him as the leading 1931 home run hitter.

"Hartnett seemed to have lost his batting eye temporarily," Hornsby said. "Grace has been hitting the ball hard. Grace is faster on his feet than Hartnett an is a good receiver. Therefore, I am going to catch him against right handed pitchers."

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Ducking your head is a stealthy fault against which you must school yourself. There are several places in the swing where you may "duck" this way. The head dipping downward means, of course, that your shoulders fail, too. One of two results will follow such dipping. You will dig into the ground back of the ball or, if not that, take a divot entirely too huge. Or you will left the ball almost straight up. Holding your head still also means holding it up.

ROEBUCK AND STEINKE IN FEATURE MAT BOUT

PAIR BATTLE TONIGHT AT GARDEN

By JACK CONWAY

Roebuck and Steinke have asked Fabiani to instruct his referee to let them fight it out until one of them has been pinned for a fall.

Jack Conway

When these worthies collided at the Garden recently, Roebuck, who used to be a boxer, started tossing left and right hand punches. One of his right hand pokes landed on Steinke's jaw and the latter faded out of the picture. A regiment of cops was called to restore order.

When Steinke came to, he took a punch at Roebuck who was in the act of stepping down the stairs leading from the ring. This started another scrap which the police had to end.

Referee Paul disqualified Roebuck on the ground he did his socking with a closed fist. In the dear old wrestling game, one can slap his opponent until he gets arm weary, but he isn't supposed to do any hitting with a closed duke. Roebuck tried to sneak a few real punches, and took it on the chin in the way of an adverse ruling by the referee.

Fabiani says the big fellows will be permitted to go to a finish tonight no matter what happens.

Zbyszko and O'Shocker in the Semi-Final

The semi-final bout, which will go 20 minutes to a decision, will bring together Wladek Zbyszko, Polish heavyweight, and Pat O'Shocker, Irish wrestler. Zbyszko is a former world's champion and has shown here on numerous occasions.

O'Shocker has appeared in four bouts at the Garden. He has won and lost two matches.

Al Piscotti, former Revere athlete will make his bow as a wrestler here this evening when he gets tangled up with Jack Washburn of California in one of the 30-minute bouts to a decision. Al played baseball and football with Everett high and Washington and Lee. He later joined the Braves as a pitcher. He is a fine athlete and it looks as if he is going places in the wrestling game.

Wee Willie Davis, former captain of the football team at the University of West Virginia, will collide with Milo Steinbach, Belgian strong man. Don DeLaun, French heavyweight, will oppose Billy Hartush of the University of Chicago, while Vank Zelesnunk will take on Jack McCarthy of Chicago.

HARVARD, M.I.T. IN BOAT RACES

New York, May 11 (AP)—In point of quantity and perhaps in quality as well, the college sprint rowing season reaches a grand climax on Saturday with regattas on the Housatonic at Derby, Ct., the Harlem at New York and the Schuylkill at Philadelphia.

Standing out a bit above the others is the Carnegie Cup regatta at Derby, where Cornell's Poughkeepsie champions make their 1931 debut against Yale and Princeton. At Philadelphia, Harvard's crack eight will face Navy and Penn, while Columbia and Massachusetts Tech are matching strokes on the Harlem.

Harvard's varsity will be favored over both Navy and Penn at Philadelphia. The same trio will match strokes in the junior varsity brush along with Marietta College of Ohio, competing in its first college regatta. Harvard and Penn alone are slated to go to the starting line in the freshman race.

The Columbia-M. I. T. regatta will consist of races for varsities and junior varsities.

Jack Conway Says Mat Bout Tonight Is a Toss-Up

Jack Conway today declared that the wrestling bout between Hans Steinke and Tiny Roebuck is a toss-up.

"Roebuck is a former boxer, and if he is allowed to punch it out, he will win," said Jack.

"If the referee makes the wrestlers live up to the rules of the game, it will be a close battle."

Miss Dorothy Richards, above, state champion, and Miss Martha Brewer, defeated Mrs. Henri Prunaret, Jr., and Miss Rosamond Vahey in an exhibition match at Paul Revere Golf Club yesterday, 5 up.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

The outcome of the 14th annual W. G. A. team match championship may be decided this week at South Shore, where the Southern and Central District teams are playing. A Southern victory will not only eliminate Central but will practically assure the winners of the title.

If Southern defeats Central and Eastern downs Northern, the race will be over and Southern will have won its first W. G. A. team match championship.

The Massachusetts Denial Society will hold forth at the Merrimack Valley C. C. on Wednesday. Dr. V. P. Carpenter won the first "Pullers" tournament at Charles River last week.

Tommie Keane had the laugh on Burt Nicoll last Saturday when his Dartmouth team nosed out a 5 to 4 victory over Harvard at Hanover.

To those who know the Hasover Country Club course, Phil Finlay's 71 will be appreciated. There are few tougher courses and it calls for perfect golf to score in the low 70's. The 2d, 9th, 10th and 18th at Hanover are exceptionally difficult par four holes, calling for two absolutely perfect shots to get home, while the 12th and 14th are tough one-shotters.

Miss Dorothy Richards, the W. G. A champion, has greatly improved her iron play since last season. She is getting a real punch in her shots and has entirely eliminated the sweep, which weakened her game a year ago.

The clubs which are allowing members to play old ball in club tournaments are well within their rights, even though they are not conforming with the U. S. G. A. regulations.

According to Ellery Rogers, The Country Club Cup tournament will attract the largest field in years. The qualifying round will be played on Thursday and there will be two rounds a day on Friday and Saturday.

Fred J. Wright, Jr., the state champion, connected with one of the longest drives of his career at Albemarle on Saturday, while playing with Fred J. Corcoran, the state handicapper. Wright rifled a shot off the first tee, which came to rest at the foot of the slope, 65 yards beyond the big tree.

Salvatore Terardi, who is a member of the Newton High School golf team, has been elected captain of the Woodland Caddy Club.

Since the defeat of Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., by Mrs. Henri F. Prunaret, Jr., at Belmont Spring, the interest in the race for individual W. G. A. honors has been resumed.

There are now five players with six victories to their credit, namely, Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Prunaret, Mrs. D. A. Baldwin, Mrs. Kellogg Boynton and Mrs. S. M. Gifford.

The Greenskeepers' Club of New England are at the Kernwood Country Club today and along with their regular 18 hole handicap medal play tournament they will hold a putting bonfest on the all velvet green. Rec. Bob Mitchell predicts a large attendance.

Paolino and Baer to Fight for $30,000

Reno, May 11 (UB)—Fighting for the heavy end of a $30,000 purse, Max Baer and Paulino Uscudun will be the main attraction of the boxing card Jack Dempsey is to stage here July 4.

Both have signed for a 20-round bout, the former heavyweight champion announced today. The winner will take 60 per cent and the loser 40.

It will be the first big-time slugfest in Nevada for 21 years, the last was here on July 4, 1910, between Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson, drawing a $270,000 gate.

LUTZE TO FACE N. H. STAR

Nick Lutze, Southern California heavyweight wrestler, has been signed to meet Leo Hyatt of New Hampshire in the semifinal bout to the Gus Sonnenberg-Count Zaryanoff mat contest at the Arena on Thursday night.

Promoter Paul Bowser picked Hyatt as an opponent for Lutze on account of the New Hampshire men's tremendous strength. Hyatt is considered the strongest man in the wrestling game.

Bingham to Speak Over Air Tonight

Bill Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, will give his views on intercollegiate athletics, coaches and tell of his own past as a track star, in an interview over WEEI between 7.15 and 7.30 tonight.

Fitzsimmons Hurls 5th Straight Win

New York, May 11—Fred Fitzsimmons pitched his second shutout in a row, blanking the Cubs with four hits, to give the Giants their second victory over Chicago, 5 to 0.

FREE TRAINING FOR SWIM MEET

Boys who have sent in entries to compete in the Boys' Club of Boston swimming meet for novices, to be held week of May 18, have the privileges of regular members of the club and can use the pool at the Roxbury Boys' Club or the Charlestown Boys' Club for training purposes.

They also can have the competent instruction of the pools' teachers, Louis Zerambo at Roxbury and H. Belmont Gould at Charlestown, who will gladly brush up their strokes or diving.

B. U. Star Is Back in Game Again

Arthur Wilson, star Boston University third baseman, out for the two past weeks on account of an injured hip, will take part in his first active practice this afternoon at Nickerson Field, Riverside.

Coach Gilmore used Jukins at first base instead of behind the bat, Bergholtz at third instead of first and LeGuern as catcher in the Clark, Boston College and New Hampshire games.

Wylie McIvor, Boston University senior and ex-outfielder, who pitched his first college baseball game against Clark, allowing only five scattered hits, will twirl the Middlebury game Wednesday.

W. G. A. MATCHES POSTPONED

The three championship team matches in the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts scheduled for this morning were postponed until next week owing to wet weather and soggy condition of the courses.

Southern was to have met Northern at Winchester, while Central and Western were booked for Woodland and Midland and Eastern were slated for play over the Oakley course.

At home anywhere. The unvarying better taste of Chesterfield has won millions of smokers and continues to win millions more. And here's why . . . Only the choicest cigarette tobaccos are used in Chesterfield, carefully selected for their mildness, for satisfying smoothness, for fine aroma and flavor. Blending and cross-blending gives to them an added smoothness, and brings out their best smoking qualities. More and more smokers are proving this for themselves every day.

FOR NINETEEN years, our Research Department has kept intimate touch with every new development of Science that could be applied to the manufacture of cigarettes. During this period there has been no development of tested value or importance to the smoker which we have not incorporated into the making of Chesterfield cigarettes.

CARDS AND REDS ON WAY TO NEW RECORDS

BRAVES PLAY TWIN BILL TOMORROW

By JOE CASHMAN

If they should follow through to the finish at their present gait, the pace-setting St. Louis Cardinals and the last-place Cincinnati Reds would set new major league records this season, the former for winning and the latter for losing.

The champion Cardinals, who make their season's debut here on Wednesday, have won 14 and lost only three games up to now.

That speed, if maintained to the end, would give the Streetmen a total of 126 victories for the campaign, or 10 more than the record made by the great Chicago Cubs machine of 1906.

The closest any club came to equaling the mark in the past 25 years was in 1927, when the New York Yankees finished up with 110 triumphs to their credit.

Both the Cubs of '06 and the Yanks of '27 had the race as good as won before the middle of July. The Cards, whether or no they set any new figures, ought to have the 1931 flag safely tucked away just as early if not earlier, unless they grow careless.

The lowly Cincinnati Reds, on the other hand, are going to smash all records for losing unless they pick up speed very soon.

The Cleveland club of 1899 set the mark in this respect, dropping 134 games. Philadelphia teams held the modern marks, the Athletics of 1916 losing 117 games and the Phils of 1928 tossing away 109 contests.

The Bowlaymen have a record today of two victories and 16 defeats. If they are unable to snap on the gay thing and put up with only 18 victories and 136 defeats.

Doubleheader at Wigwam Tomorrow

Despite the fact that one game of the Sabbath doubleheader which was washed out by rain was originally scheduled for this afternoon and had been moved forward purposely to manufacture a Sunday rain bill, there will be no contest at the Wigwam today.

One of yesterday's games will be played off as part of the doubleheader tomorrow, while the other is booked for Tuesday, June 23.

SPORTS REEL

DAILY SHOTS FROM EVERYWHERE

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, shown in the above International Newsreel photo, was photoed in a practice match the other day. If the lure of gold draws her from amateur ranks, as is probable, she will be ready for any kind of opposition.

Equipoise, C. V. Whitney's racer, will try to stage a great comeback when he goes to post in the Kentucky Derby on Saturday. The runner failed to cop in the Preakness Saturday, but his backers claim he will show his true form this week. Illness slowed up Equipoise.

Stribling Grounded Until After Title Go

Atlanta, Ga., May 11 (INS)—William Lawrence Stribling, Jr., has been grounded.

De Stribling, his father-manager, decreed that Strib is not to fly his plane any more until after the championship fight with Max Schmeling on June 3. Pa is tired of having to worry over his son's daredevil pranks.

While Pa did not say so, it is understood the ban on Stribling's flying was at the request of Bill Carey, Madison Square Garden official, who thinks planes are all right for the other fellow.

COAST TRACK STARS BREAK RECORDS

Fresno, Cal., May 11 (INS)—Western athletes today had shattered two world's track records, tied another, cracked a national intercollegiate record and broke a national interscholastic mark in a day of sparkling performances at the Fresno relays.

The first record to go by the boards was the 440-yard relay, formerly held by Newark Athletic Club runners. University of Southern California runners stepped the distance in 40.8 to beat the old time of 41 seconds.

The second world's record fell when the Stanford relay team stepped the mile relay in 3:12:8 to knock 8 seconds from the former record.

Frank Wykoff, Southern California, ran the century in 9.5 to tie the accepted record in this event.

Floyd Wilson, Riverside Union high school, leaped 23 feet, 6½ inches, to shatter the former interscholastic record of 23 feet 7 inches in the broad jump.

Southern California won the meet with 72 1-3 points. Los Angeles Athletic Club scored 35 points, Stanford 49 1-3 points, Olympic Club 23 points, U. S. C. freshmen 12 and California 7 1-3.

Lewis to Take on Ex-Harvard Coach

Chicago, May 10 (US) — Ed "Strangler" Lewis, the 200-pound king, is here preparing for his match with Frank Judson, former Harvard University crew star. They will tangle in the windup, best two in three falls, of a show which is being promoted by Jim Mullen and Joe Coffey at the Coliseum Wednesday.

Lewis still claims the heavyweight championship, despite his recent defeat by Henri De Glane in Montreal. The Strangler and his manager, Billy Sandow, claim they won the verdict on a sour decision in that match and have offered to guarantee De Glane a purse of $25,000 if he will agree to a return match.

Tierney went on to Maryland, and won the Preakness, to Kentucky to take down the Derby, and then for the great Classic at Chicago's Arlington. After the Preakness he received a wire. It just said "Congratulations" and wasn't even signed. But he rode his other races with the bit of yellow paper right over his heart in a pocket of his silken riding shirt.

October and the Belmont meeting came. The days grew shorter by and not once did he see the eyes and face he sought. Further into May came, and the first three races went into the record books and Tierney's riding, those first three, Every ounce of energy was being saved for the biggest race of the year.

In the back room, just before the 10-minute bell, a call came for Tierney to come down to the paddock judges' stand.

Then he saw her, with a tall gray-haired man, and with Senator Wallace, owner of Rose Hill —his boss.

"Tip" Is Introduced
He Met "Tot" Warren

"Tip," said the Senator, as he approached them, "I want to introduce some friends of mine who have come down to the paddock judges' stand.

Then he saw her, with a tall gray-haired man, and with Senator Wallace, owner of Rose Hill —his boss.

"Tip," said the Senator, as he approached them, "I want to introduce some friends of mine who have come down to the paddock judges' stand.

Hazily Tierney put out a hand to grasp the tiny fingers she held out to him in girlish frankness. Things seemed to swim before his eyes as he spoke to the girl. The second bell came and saved him—he had to rush back and prepare to go to the paddock.

Into the head finally there came a clear picture of the situation — Highlander was Major Warren's horse. On Featherstone he was to be riding to beat the horse of the girl who, though he'd just officially met her, had been an idol to worship for many months.

At the post there was a delay. Some of the animals frenzied by the excitement of the occasion were fractious. When the tape went up Tierney found himself caught in a jam. When he got Featherstone into action, first time past the stand, the leaders were five lengths ahead, with Highlander on the rail. Out of th tail of his eye he saw the girl madly cheering. Then the dust and the swirl of riding in the rack took all his attention.

Tip Finished First
Then Came the Flowers

The steel muscles of the great animal under him began to hit a rhythmic motion space-eating to smooth action and rapid stride. Bit by bit he closed, until as the backstretch Featherstone was just a length behind Highlander's flying heels. Still closer—closer came the finish wire.

Inside him "Tip" Tierney felt a maddening eagerness. He hated to win—because of her—and yet he felt he had to. The climax came even as he thought. In bit of open space between Highlander and the rail, they finish by less than a hundred yards away. A quick slap of his whip across his mount's flanks, a slackening of bit and pressure of the heels.

It was Featherstone, by a neck, when they hung up the numbers.

There came the flowers, the cameras, and the weigh-in. Tierney dressed and then headed toward the stands to watch the last two races. He found himself suddenly in a swirl of silks and laces.

"I could almost kiss you," she declared breezily.

"I honestly didn't want to beat your horse," Tierney started to tell her—"I wanted to see you have the winner."

Her pealing laughter made him stop.

"You goose!" she told him, "it did bet on the winner. I bet on YOU."

Premier jockeys DO marry daughters of owners—I know, because I'm going to "Tip" Tierney's wedding this coming June.

Street Catches as Cardinals Win

Camden, N. J., May 11—The St. Louis Cardinals came here from Philadelphia and defeated Lee Schaub a ball team, 13 to 0, in an exhibition game. Tony Faulfman pitched for the Cards and yielded but five hits. Manager Gabby Street, old-time catcher, donned the mask for one inning and showed how he used to perform when he was Walter Johnson's battery mate.

RICHARDS-TILDEN TILT TOMORROW

Big Bill Tilden, who started a series in New York Saturday night and beat Vinnie Richards in four sets, is in Boston today.

Tilden goes against Richards again at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. It is the key match of the series of five which Tilden hopes will place him in the position of being the world's professional champion.

A large crowd is looked for when Richards and Tilden face each other at 8:30 o'clock sharp tomorrow night. More than 12,000 persons paid $50,000 to see Big Bill vanquish Little Vinnie in New York.

In addition to these two stars will be Ernet Pare, who will team in doubles with Richards against Tilden and Hunter, and also Bobbie Seller, the young Californian. Richards will be accompanied here by Mrs. Richards and his 5½-year-old daughter, Adrianne.

Jap Net Cup Team to Battle Egypt

Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, May 11—Japan clinched its second round Davis cup tennis tie with Jugo-Slavia by winning the doubles and now will face Egypt in the third round.

CLASH WITH CAMPOLO

New York, May 11 (AP)—Tommy Loughran, who has fought his way back into a heavyweight contending role after a knockout by Jack Sharkey, will discover this week whether his speed and boxing skill are enough to offset the bulk and punching power of Victorio Campolo of the Argentine.

Cameronian Favored in English Derby

London, May 11 (AP)—Cameronian, which won the classic 2000 guineas at Newmarket last month, today remained the favorite for the Epsom Downs Derby in the call-over odds at the Victoria club. His price was nine to two against. Goyeasca, second to Cameronian in the 2000 guineas, was second favorite for the Derby at 13 to 2, with Marshall Field's Jacopo third at 100 to 8.

The Derby will be run at Epsom Downs June 3 over a mile and a half course, half a mile farther than the 2000 guineas.

Need for Banking Reforms

Political prejudice should no longer be permitted to stand in the way of raising the efficiency of American banking to a higher standard.

Up to the present, the legislative bloc which has spoken for small country bankers has blocked proposals for permitting the setting up of banking systems which could keep apace with modern industrial corporations.

The sentimental desire to protect the small banker from the natural consequences of modern economic developments has led to an unbalanced situation.

Former President Coolidge wisely points out that in the present economic readjustment one of the fundamental needs is sound banking.

In 1930, there were 1345 bank suspensions in the United States, and in the first quarter of 1931, 370, according to the Federal Reserve bulletin.

Even though most of these institutions in time pay their debts to depositors, they temporarily lock up vast units of purchasing power, and hence dislocate the normal processes of trade.

Edmund Platt, retired member of the Federal Reserve Board, is right in saying, "It is a disgrace to us as a nation that we do not find a remedy" for inefficient banking.

In pointing to a way out of the muddle, Mr. Platt says:

"I am strongly convinced that we need a relaxation of the legislative restrictions which prevent our country banks from combining and from uniting through combination with strong banks in the cities—not necessarily the largest cities. . . . No bank or banking institution should have its operations limited to any one industry or any one set of allied industries, nor should a bank be forced to buy commercial paper in order to obtain diversification in normal times, or to have the greater part of its portfolio in bonds. It should have an opportunity so to diversify its loans among its own depositors that the failure of one crop or one industry or even the depression of a whole industry, such as agriculture, would not ruin the bank and cause tremendous additional losses on top of the losses due to depressed prices in that industry."

The risk from weak banks, which impoverish communities, is even a greater hazard.

After the readjustment, there will doubtless be a strong demand for revision of the basic banking law.

Public opinion should be prepared for such changes as will better safeguard the interests of depositors.

The time has come to make banking scientific and safe.

Delicate Danish Drinkers

There might be, in Hamlet's phrase, "something rotten in Denmark," but it can't be the whiskey. Copenhagen savants administered the dose of six cubic centimeters of it for each kilogram of weight to seventy "martyrs" to science, who were chiefly motorists.

Our office Einstein works it out, roughly, that a 200-pound man downed a bottle and a half. One martyr found total bliss after bending his elbow just once. Twenty experienced drinkers were not fazed a particle.

These Copenhagen drinkers weren't given a fair test. They might have copper-lined stomachs, but they don't know what real firewater is until they stack up with the bathtub-gin quaffers of Boston.

Listen, World!: No Regrets

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Dangers of Generosity

GENEROSITY is another one of those things apt to hang you a painful surprise.

Way back when you were five, Mama told you to share your candy with little Jimmy. Then little Jimmy would love you and Mama 'n' Papa would be proud of you. For everybody loved and was proud of Generous Little Boys.

Elsie Robinson

That was your first sales-talk on Generosity and it went over big with you. Naturally, as your instincts were against sharing candy or anything else with anybody. But you hankered for popularity and applause quite as much at five as at 45. And if you could get all that pleasing publicity just by divvying up on a lil ole lollipop—

So, with both eyes on the profits, you decided to be generous. But the years brought a gradual disillusion. You're still sharin' lollipops as Mama said you should. But do the folks who get your lollipops owe you for your kindly act? And do the onlookers praise you for your noble deeds?

Quite contrary!

Instead of being grateful because you have given them one lollipop, the recipients of your favor are usually mad because you have three left. Why should you have lollipops to give away when they haven't? Why should they have to be grateful to you when they're really a lot smarter than you are and would have millions of lollipops themselves if they'd only had your breaks?

So, while he's outwardly gushing and grinning and telling you what a grand guy you are, "little Jimmy" is inwardly hating and envying you. Be generous—and buy yourself an enemy!

And how do the bystanders, who watch you go through your Big Act, feel about it? Mama had said they'd admire and praise you. Do they? Not so's you'd notice it. Generally they think you're a sap and say so. And they, too, are secretly mad at you. Not for one second do they believe in the pure philanthropy of your deed. No sir-e-e-e, you're just trying to Show Off!

So, if you're looking for popularity, generosity is one of the worst investments you can make. It will bore you a little grief. And yet—

If you are willing to undertake generosity as you would any other great adventure—

Facing its certain dangers and discomforts, realizing its limitations and handicaps—

Knowing that you must pay as heavily for this as for any other experience—

Then generosity is the greatest and most gallant experiment you can make with your time, your money and your love, and, though others will despise and hate you, and nearly always fail you, you will never regret that experiment for one instant yourself. For you may empty your pocketbook, but you will fill your soul.
